Dollfuss Is Dead.
Dillinger Buried.
Our Sweet Civilization.
Why Communism Grows.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HERE IS NEWS that will agitate the world. Mussolini and the French government especially, Vienna reported, early yesterday, that Dollfuss, the small dictator, who has ruled Austria for two years, had been shot, and made a prisoner by representatives of Hitler's Nazi movement. Later came positive information from Austria's embassy at Prague, that Dollfuss was dead.

The death of Dollfuss, with subsequent seizure of Austria and ultimate annexation by Hitler's power would upset Europe.

WHEN IT COMES to killing, Mr. Hitler's organization seems more energetic than that of Mr. Dollfuss, although the latter showed energy when one Austrian Socialist convicted of terrorism was hanged, three hours after the bomb explosion.

AFTER BEING exposed to view for a day and a night in the Chicago morgue, and a long ride in a "rusty old hearse" with his father, a seventy-year old Quaker farmer sitting on the front seat, Dillinger is buried at last, from his sister's house.

Dillinger, who since his killing had been wrapped in a sheet, was dressed for his funeral in a brand new "herring-bone" gray suit, stiff white collar, gray tie with white spots. The herring-bone suit was too big, long sleeves covered the hands as Dillinger, moved from the pine box in which he travelled from Chicago to his sister's house, lay in a velvet-lined "better class" casket.

FUTURE HISTORIANS will know about civilization in the United States in 1934, when they read newspapers of July 25. They will read of long lines of men, women and children standing through the night in Chicago, waiting to see the bullet-riddled face and body of a bandit. They will read of ingenious Americans selling small pieces of cloth, one inch square, colored red, "guaranteed to be cut from Dillinger's handkerchief, stained with his own blood." They will read of a woman asking the police for permission to cut a lock of the bandit's hair, of a shuddering girl of 14 taken by her mother "to see what happens to people when they don't be good," and a weeping boy of nine, told by police, "No, Sonny, you are too young.

GEORGE E. ALLEN, who works for the government, spent several weeks investigating poverty, lack of jobs, bread lines, as part of his job. He testifies that 90 per cent of the people in want really want work, also that those hired to deal out jobs or money are "snooty" persons, "doing more to antagonize the destitute than to help them."

MR. ALLEN OBSERVED, also, which ought to interest our better minds, that "even the Communists taught me something. Their power is gained principally because they will listen to people who are down and out, and will work for them and fight for them."

Mr. Allen says that that is the attitude "that the relief people should take, but relief people won't even listen to you, most of the time."

Under those circumstances the Communist party should grow.

A MAN LAUGHED violently when his house, barn, wife, children and horses were all burned. Questioned, he said, he laughed because the disaster was so unusually complete.

Income taxpayers may have a similar feeling about the suggestion that New York City, needing money for the unemployed, tax incomes of $5,000, 12½ per cent; and of $50,000 or more, 75 per cent. That would not leave much after the national government "cut." It might be simpler, more equitable to tax all incomes of $50,000 and more 100 per cent, with the guarantee that men paying the tax would have a first chance at the dole or any relief fund that might be established with their taxes.

Washington, where they seek new "tax sources," will read that New York suggestion with jealous awe.

RAILROAD EXECUTIVES in Chicago, in secret session seek a way to "raise $360,000,000 of additional revenue without driving business to their competitors," namely to motor buses and motor trucks.

They could get the government to raise freight rates probably, for this is a price raising administration. But shippers might use motor trucks.

There is a solution of the railroads' problem, but it would take some time, a good deal of money and a little intelligence.

The government might supply the money. Intelligence to bring railroads up-to-date to meet competition must be supplied by railroads. It is in their power to elliminate motorbus competition, and 50 per cent of automobile competition quickly with lighter equipment, higher speed and complete safety.

MANY MISFORTUNES have assailed Cuba recently, beginning with a nopelessly low price for sugar, followed by revolutions, shootings, great detriment to business, ruination of hotels. Recently the malarial mosquito has been spreading its germs widely and destructively, 6,000 malarial cases in the Santiago area alone, and now comes a strike, that ties up all telephones in Cuba. It is difficult for the average American to realize what it would mean if telephone service were suddenly stopped here. In Cuba, the government announces that unless a prompt settlement is reached it will "be forced to take over and operate the telephone service."

WIDOW HELD IN 'HEX' MYSTERY

Bellevue Police Probe Reveals Weird 'Voodoo' Rites

The burning of a fiery cross in a vacant lot in Bellevue today led to the arrest of a young widow and the disclosure of an alleged witchcraft spell involving four families on Shade street, Bellevue.

The woman arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct is Mrs. Elizabeth Donovan, 34, mother of five children who lives at 724 Shade street.

Lieut. Price S. McPherson, of the Bellevue police, also arrested Norman Parker, on a charge of disorderly conduct and on suspicion that he set fire to the cross.

Mrs. Donovan later was released on her own recognizance to appear for a hearing tonight. Parker was held for further investigation.

BARES WEIRD RITES

Lieut. McPherson led a squad into the East End, where he questioned a woman suspected of telling fortunes and practicing witchcraft on Mrs. Donovan. While this woman admitted she knew Mrs. Donovan, McPherson said she denied exerting an influence upon the widow. She, too, was instructed to appear at the hearing.

Lieut. McPherson said his investigation had revealed such weird machinations as the burying of stewed chicken hearts in neigh-

Leaps to Death, Foiling Grilling In Dillinger Case

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Brought to the office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for questioning in connection with the Dillinger case, James Probasco, 67, a West Side resident, committed suicide today by jumping from a nineteenth floor window to the alley below.

S. P. Cowley, in charge of the bureau in the absence of Melvin H. Purvis, said the government had been informed that it was in Probasco's home at 2309 North Crawford avenue that Dillinger had has face-lifting operation performed.

No one could be found who witnessed the leap, but the body landed in an alley near Adams street. It narrowly missed a pedestrian and was badly mangled.

Agents had gone to Probasco's home this morning and he accompanied them without objections, Cowley said. He was left alone in a room facing the alley for a few minutes before the questioning was to begin. The next thing the agents knew was a report that a man had leaped to his death.

LINK MACHINE-GUNNER

Cowley said Homer Van Meter, ace machine-gunner for the Dillinger gang, also had a face-lifting operation performed at the Probasco home. He said the physician who performed the operations had not yet been taken, but that the government agents were after him.

The sensational leap resulted in the seventeenth death attributed to John Dillinger and his bloody gang.

Dillinger himself, shot down by federal agents and police Sunday night, was number sixteen in the grisly chain that has lengthened steadily since dangerous John was liberated from the Lima, O., jail in October, 1933, over the body of the slain sheriff, Jess Sarber.

Government operatives also believed that both Dillinger and Van Meter had submitted to attempts at the Probasco place to obliterate their finger prints with acid.

PLASTIC SURGERY

When Dillinger's body was placed on a slab in the Cook County Morgue Sunday midnight, it was ascertained that hallmark scars on his face had been nearly concealed by a clever plastic surgeon.

From their prisoners the federal men apparently sought to obtain more information about Dillinger, Van Meter and possibly John Hamilton and George Nelson, other members of the outfit whom the government has vowed to bring in. Cowley said Probasco, who operated a tavern, had made no admissions and had insisted that he knew nothing of the operations. Probasco himself had no medical experience, he said.

(Other news of the Dillinger case appears on page 10.)

STOCKS SINK OVER CRISIS IN VIENNA

Prices Down $1 to $10 In Worst Spill Since Last September

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Unconfirmed rumors that Italian troops had crossed the Austrian border today sent prices on the New York Stock Exchange catapulting for the worst spill in nearly a year.

Many issues were off $1 to $10 a share, and many were at new low prices for 1934. Trading was in the largest volume in months. Price averages indicated that the general level of shares had been reduced to around the low point reached in the reaction of last October, and with that exception the level was back to that of May, 1933.

Union Pacific dropped nearly $6 to close to $102, American Telephone $2 to around $110, Chrysler about $3 to under $34, United States Steel $2 to close to $34; Allied Chemicals more than $7 to close to $121, United States Smelting about $10 to about $120, Case more than $6 to $36, Santa Fe about $4 to close to $52, General Motors more than $2 to around $26, Johns Manville about $5 to $41 and New York Central nearly $3 to under $20.

The "war babies," including du Pont, Hercules Powder and Atlas Powder, as well as such issues as Anaconda and International Nickel, were among the weakest, losing from 2 to 4 points.

EUROPEAN WAR THREAT GRAVEST SINCE 1914: NAZI FOES ARMING

International News Service

Europe today is faced with the most serious international situation to arise since this very day 20 years ago when the news was published of Serbia's rejection of the Austrian ultimatum, which started the World War.

Developments succeeding the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, of Austria, in a Nazi coup yesterday were:

Italian troops along the Austrian border, whose number has been more than doubled since the Nazi campaign began, were held in readiness for eventualities.

"Nothing less than a war zone," a correspondent of the London Daily Express, who has just come through Brenner Pass from Italy into Austria, calls the area in a special article published today. He said he saw military engineers laying underground telephone wires, artillery and machine gun emplacements, and streets cluttered with military transports.

Germany acted quickly to avoid the moral responsibility of protecting Dollfuss' assassins. The German ambassador to Austria, Rieth, who arranged for the safe conduct of the plotters to the German border, immediately was recalled and the border was closed to prevent entry of the guilty into Germany.

Joint action by Britain, France and Italy was expected today by diplomatic observers, who pointed out that all three governments had signed a communique affirming the necessity of Austrian independence in February after the street fighting in Vienna.

Dr. Anton Rintelen, Austrian ambassador to Rome, who was named as Dollfuss' successor in the Nazis' fake radio announcement of the chancellor's resignation, died of bullet wounds in a Vienna jail. Authorities said he shot himself; his widow declared he was "murdered."

A Central News dispatch from Berlin said that the government was alarmed by reports of concentration of Italian troops on the Austrian frontier and that detachments of the German Reichswehr may be moved to the German frontier.

The Austrian cabinet was in session today with the arrival of Prince Starhemberg, vice chancellor and head of the Heimwehr, from Venice, and named him chancellor to succeed Schuschnigg.

Mussolini returned to Rome from Riccione, where he was to have met Dollfuss tomorrow. He and his wife were first to console Mme. Dollfuss, who was there awaiting her husband. A dispatch to a London paper reported that she is an expectant mother.

The former Empress Zita, of Austria, will hold an "imperial court" today in her castle near Brussels to determine what steps she will take in her determined campaign to place her son, the Archduke Otto, on the throne of the Hapsburgs in Vienna. The Archduke Eugene is hurrying from Vienna to report to her on the chances of Hapsburg restoration.

Armies Mass On Many Fronts

BULLETIN.

ROME, July 26.—(AP.)—Four army divisions, each with a strength of about 8,000 men, have been ordered to points along the Austrian frontier, it was stated by an official communique issued late today.

VIENNA, July 26.—(AP.)—Rumors circulated abroad that Italian troops had crossed the Austrian border were esphatically denied today by the Austrian foreign office as being "absolutely unfounded."

ROME, July 26.—Italy served notice upon the world in general and Germany in particular today that she was willing to fight to preserve Austria's independence.

Premier Mussolini hastily arrived by automobile from Riccione, where he sent a vigorously worded message to Vienna, pledging Italy to defend Austrian sovereignty if necessary.

Civil War Sweeping Austria

BULLETIN.

VIENNA, July 26.—(AP.)—It was unofficially stated today that Premier Mussolini of Italy is expected to come here to attend the funeral for the assassinated Chancellor Dollfuss Saturday.

VIENNA, July 26.—Civil war broke out in Austria today as Nazis battled government forces for control of half a dozen cities in the province of Styria, following the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss.

Nazis were reported to be marching in increasing numbers against the combined forces of the army and the Fascist Heimwehr, or home guard.

An official announcement at Graz, capital of the strong Nazi province, said 14 army men have been killed. Nazi losses were believed heavy.

Sharp fighting raged last night and today about several towns of the province, southwest of Vienna.

Wrong House Torn Down In City's Slum Drive

Woman Asks Council To Pay For 'Mistake'

Mrs. Roberta C. Markell, owner of property on Smallman street and also in the rear on Mulberry way, stated in a letter to City Council that the Department of Public Health had torn down the wrong building. She wants to be paid for the mistake.

She also said that the Department of Public Safety has sent her two notices that her partly torn down good property at 3908-10 Smallman street is now unsafe and dangerous.

Mrs. Markell, who lives at 720 Wallace avenue, Wilkinsburg, said in her communication:

"In the latter part of March the Department of Health requested permission to tear down the rear building in Mulberry way and I gave my consent. Sometime in April I discovered that through some mistake or error the city had started to tear down the building at 3906 Smallman street and was damaging the adoining buildings without my consent."

She asked that the amount of damage be ascertained and that she be reimbursed.

STORM TO ROUT HEAT WAVE

July's smothering heat wave hovered over Pittsburgh again today as the temperature reached 96 at 3 o'clock, but relief from the week-long spell was forecast for tonight.

Thunderstorms, which already had brought relife to other sections of the parched Middel West and East Pennsylvania were due here, the Weather Bureau said.

The Associated Press death list for the nation in the present wave had reached 1,213, including 98 who perished in Chicago yesterday, the highest toll of any city.

In Pittsburgh, the mercury had dropped to 70 at 7 a. m., a decline of 26 degrees from yesterday's high of 96 at 3 p. m. By noon, however, the temperature had climbed 23 degrees.

CIVIL WAR RAGES IN AUSTRIA AS NAZIS FIGHT FOR CONTROL

vice chancellor, this afternoon succeeded Chancellor Dollfuss as the chief of the Austrian government.

At a cabinet meeting today Dr. Schuschnigg, who was named acting chancellor yesterday after the siege of Ballhausplatz, formally handed over control of affairs to Starhemberg.

The elevation of Prince Starhemberg gives Austria a definitely Fascist chief of state, and puts the Heimwehr in a firm position.

Starhemberg has not yet formally been named chancellor, but it was expected he would be appointed to the chancellorship later today by President Miklas.

At the same time it was announced that Anto Rintelen, who might have succeeded Dollfuss had the putsch succeeded, has died.

Rintelen, Austrian ambassador to Italy, shot himself in a Vienna cell, according to authorities, although his widow declared he had been "murdered." Before he died, Rintelen scrawled a note reading, "I am innocent."

AID FOR WIDOW

The first act of the cabinet when it met under its new leader was to vote an authorization for "appropriate" financial measures for the future welfare of Dollfuss' widow and his two children, five-year-old Eva and four-year-old Rudolf.

Then the cabinet declared the creation of a special military court to try the offenders in yesterday's putsch when a group of Nazis stormed the chancellery and killed the country's leader. The court will consist of four officers, one of the civil guard and three of the army, the highest ranking of which will preside.

The government, it was indicated, will act sternly against the killers of the former leader, but apart from this punishment, it was indicated that one of the subjects of most concern was that of relationships with other countries as a result of the murder.

Meantime rumblings of war were heard over Europe as a result of the menacing situation.

Italian troops were massed on the border, ordered by Mussolini to be ready to march on short notice.

Martial law was enforced throughout Vienna and in Styria. Members of the Heimwehr who had fought before for the slain chancellor, were mobilized throughout the cosntry.

POWERS TO MEET

Reports were current that representatives of Europeon powers and the Little Entente were to meet here today to discuss Austria's fate.

News that Italian soldiers were camped on the border caused alarm or reassurance—according to the viewpoint.

A group of fanatical Nazis, variously estimated at from 144 to 300, whose daring seizure of the chancellery yesterday resulted in Dollfuss' assassination, were held under heavy guard in a military barracks.

Their guarantee of safe conduct to Germany, made by Emil Fey, former vice chancellor and a Heimwehr leader, was revoked by the government when the little "Gamecock Chancellor" was found dead.

Dr. Jurt Schuschnigg, minister of social welfare in Dollfuss' cabinet, who was named acting chancellor by Miklas, indicated in his first official statement that policies of the Nazi victim would be carried out.

POLICIES TO PREVAIL

Schuschnigg said:

"The Chancellor is dead, but his work lives in Austria and we call the world to witness that we still in this hour are advance fighters for German culture . . . The Dollfuss testament remains our guiding star to the future."

Reports of fighting in Styria last night were received. Shooting was heard in some parts of the capital.

The Nazi conspirators, wearing Heimwehr uniforms, swooped down on the chancellery yesterday afternoon and, killing Dollfuss, held control of the building for six hours.

They compelled Fey to go to the balcony time and again to reassure the crowd outside, and order troops and police not to harm Nazis.

Although he spoke guardedly, Dr. Schuschnigg expressed disapproval of the part Herr Rieth, Germany's minister to Vienna, played in arranging safe conduct for the perpetrators of the putsch.

The semi-official Reichspost, attacking the minister, said:

"To Minister Rieth fell the task unexampled in history of negotiating with criminals who had killed the chancellor of a German state for their admission into Germany.

"This demand for the putschists to be brought across the German border gives a clear indication of who planned and organized this day."

Morning newspapers said a priest finally was called for Dollfuss, at his dying request, but arrived too late. One report fixed the time of his death at 5 p. m. Another at 4:30 p. m.

(A dispatch to the London Daily Mail this morning said Heimwehr members and civilians attempted during the night to lynch the assassins of Dollfuss but were repulsed when police threatened to fire into the crowd.)

The Nazis' daring putsch, following by a day the hanging of a Socialist in Dollfuss' campaign to suppress terrorists, began shortly before 1 p. m.

Firing shots, they ran into the building and swung the huge doors shut. Then they disarmed guards within, dashed into government offices and lined up employes.

SHOT IN FLIGHT

Ten men went into Dollfuss' office. A government official later said the Chancellor was slain in attempting to flee to an adjoining building. This account said he was shot twice at close range, pistol bullets entering his throat and chest.

Vienna spent a wild afternoon, filled with rumors.

Heimwehr men rushed up to force their way into the chancellery, only to be shoved back by police.

Threats to dynamite the building were not put into effect because of fear of killing Dollfuss, Fey and other officials. A battalion of infantry was drawn around the place. Women and children crowded streets around the square.

Fey appeared and called for the commandant of police. He was asked:

"Are you arrested?"

Fey replied, "No," but he was surrounded by uniformed me.

Fey appeared for a third time on the balcony, and when an attack was threatened shouted:

"I command you not to attack."

Finally the conspirators agreed to leave under promise of safe conduct, and Fey emerged from a rear door, to be greeted by cheering Heimwehr men. Fey brusquely waved them aside.

Then the prisoners came out, one by one. The conspirators rode out in lorries, but were seized.

Fey in a radio speech said he was permitted to see the dying Dollfuss, and the Chancellor begged that his family be taken care of.

DEATHS MOUNT IN TEXAS GALE

HOUSTON, Tex., July 26.—(AP.)—A death list that may reach more than 30 was indicated today as the Texas coast country from Galestton to Corpus Christi dug out from the wreckage of yesterday's 80-mile-an-hour hurricance.

The property and crop damage was counted at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The heaviest loss of life was believed to have been around Bay City, where 17 persons were believed to have been swept to death when a tidal wave, variously estimated at between four and 40 feet high, rushed six miles inland.

Ten persons were missing in the Matagorda Bay area.

Five persons were killed and another injured probably fatally in a tornado which wrecked the farming community of Morelos, Jackson County, late yesterday. The tornado apparently was a phase of the hurricane.

Archduke Eyes Throne In Austrian Crisis

International News Service.

BRUSSELS, July 26.—Shocked at the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, the young Archduke Otto, claimant to the Austrian throne, convoked officials of his court into session today at the villa outside Brussels where he is living in exile with his mother, the former Empress Zita.

It is believed the possibility of Otto's immediate return to Vienna and the prospects of his early enthronement were discussed.

The Archduke Eugene, Otto's uncle, who is now in Vienna, is expected to fly to Brussels to acquaint Otto and Zita with the political situation in the Austrian capital.

The young archduke and his mother received first news of the Austrian Nazis' putsch and the murder of Dollfuss from International News Service last night. Otto said sadly:

"I will pray for the soul of Chancellor Dollfuss. He was a great patriot."

ENVOY SEES END OF NAZI POWER

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—The two shots which killed dimunitive Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria's "Little Napoleon," also sounded the death knell of the Nazi movement in Austria, Edgar L. Prochnik, the Austrian Minister to Washington, declared today in an interview with International News Service.

Arriving hurriedly back at the Austrian legation from a nearby seaside resort, Minister Prochnik predicted the merciless assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss at the hands of fanatical Nazis would prove a devastating boomerang against the Nazi movement in Austria. He said:

"The majority of the Austrian people loved our Chancellor. The Austrian Nazis struck themselves a death blow in assassinating him. I believe the consequences of his death will be a severe reaction throughout Austria against the entire Nazi movement. Those who may have felt some sympathy for the Nazi movement now will be turned bitter.

"The Nazis made a great mistake. They would have been treated much more harshly had it not been for Chancellor Dollfuss. He deplored bloodshed and killing, even of his enemies."

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.—George Bancroft, he-man actor, admitted today he had been unable to find a divorce degree he said he had obtained nearly 20 years ago from his first wife, Mrs. Edna G. Bancroft, actress, who sued him for $1,000 a month maintenance here Tuesday.

Bancroft, now married to the former Octavia Broske, declared that Attorney Herman Roth had obtained the degree for him "either in New York or an adjoining state." He said:

"We've wired Roth and he's been dead three years. We're trying to get hold of his records."

Paris Newspaper Accuses Germany

PARIS, July 26.—(INS.)—The newspaper Pairs-Soir appeared on the boulevards at noon today with a flaming denunciation of Germany as the author of the Dollfuss assassination.

NAZIS ELATED OVER PUTSCH

MUNICH, Germany, July 26.—(AP.)—Headquarters of the Austrian Nazis in Munich was undisguisedly jubilant today over the turn of events in Austria.

Leaders emphasized Germany's intention of maintaining its policy of "watchful waiting," but meanwhile incoming trains disgorged subordinate leaders and officers of exiled Austrian legionnaires in Germany, apparently under orders to report to headquarters.

Three thousand of the legionnaires already were on the scene, fully armed and equipped with steel helmets. Filling five local barracks, they were not permitted to leave the premises.

Reports that Chancellor Hitler, of Germany, was arriving here from Beyreuth today to discuss the Austrian situation received no confirmation. The press spokesman at the "brown house," German Nazi headquarters, said:

"The chancellor still is in Middle Germany."

Firing Across Border Laid to Jugo-Slavs

HULL SILENT ON AUSTRIA

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, July 26.—A new European war probably has been averted by Italy's decision to view the Austrian situation with calmness and to make no hasty move.

This was the opinion expressed in official circles here today following word that Premier Mussolini of Italy had decided to refrain from sending Italian soldiers across the Austrian border.

Esteem for the statesmanship of the Italian dictator mounted to new levels in official quarters as the result of his latest display of calmness in an event of such vital importance to the entire world.

Secretary of State Hull declined to comment on the events in Austria. He was receiving frequent communications from American Minister George S. Messersmith at Vienna concerning the situation, but most of them considered of such a confidential nature that the State Department declined to make them public.

America Lacks Word Meaning 'Putsch'

What the "coup d'etat" is to the French the "putsch" is to Teutonic peoples.

The American has no word for it.

The "putsch" is a bold and unexpected stroke, accomplished while the victim is off guard. It usually is an action outside of established rules, often but not necessarily accompanied by violence.

The American might call it insurrection, disorderly conduct, or a rowdy riot, but he would fail to catch all the meaningful connotations of "putsch."

Tourist Trade Snagged By Revolt in Vienna

VIENNA, July 26.—(AP.)—Yesterday's stirring events at the Chancellery put a crimp in what tourist business there remained in Austria.

This is the first impression gained by an outsider reaching Austria. On the train which brought an Associated Press correspondent from Berlin to Vienna there were only three sleeping-car passengers, two of them American newspapermen, and the third an Austrian woman.

Arriving at Vienna the correspondent saw "rubberneck wagons" which usually carry tourists from one sightseeing place to another, but today filled with Heimwehr men weighted down with full equipment.

A tourist party of 150 Frenchmen which arrived yesterday was sent back hastily on the urgent advice of the French Minister.

While in Vienna many private and all public buildings displayed black flags in honor of the assassinated Chancellor Dollfuss, the correspondent was impressed by the lack of these tokens of mourning in the little towns and villages through which the Berlin-Vienna express passed on the way from the Czecho-Slovakian border to the Austrian capital.

"You don't see anybody shedding tears over Dollfuss, do you? What a mad thing for him to have attempted to keep two nations apart which were cultural and linguistically so closely allied! Imagine the American President trying to keep the United States and Canada apart."

At none of the railway stations en routet were there any armed guards, nor did the villagers seem to be affected in the slightest by events in Vienna.

On the other hand, the first sight greeting the correspondent's eye on leaving the Vienna station was an army detachment; its members wearing forbidding steel helmets and marching to some station in the heart of the city.

Before all public buildings police guards with rifles swung over their shoulders were in evidence. Otherwise the city seemed normal to the outsider except that the streets seemed to be deserted for a city the size of Vienna.

EUROPE BEGINS MASSING OF TROOPS

Italy's Army Moves on Austrian Border; Europe Alarmed

sounded a note of peace. A statement, given out after Il Duce had conferred with several colleagues, said:

"The events in Austria, while filling the whole Italian people with sadness, provide no cause for alarm, as the government seems to be in full control, even so far as nominating a temporary chancellor.

Mussolini indicated there would be no movement of troops across the border unless conditions changed materially.

It is understood that the foreign office already is in active communication with Great Britain and France.

Garrisons near the border are making ready for instant action, and Italy is prepared to throw a fully equipped army of perhaps 80,000 men across the Austrian frontier within a few hours' notice.

The third naval squadron is reported steaming up the North Adriatic in the direction of Trieste.

NATIONS TO CONFER

The newspapers confirm an International News Service report of yesterday that diplomatic representatives of the Great Powers, with representatives of the Little Entente group, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia participating, will meet in Vienna today to survey the situation.

This conference, called at the suggestion of the Austrian government suddenly after the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, is expected to take no decisive action. The Vienna diplomats, however, may make a joint recommendation to their home governments as to steps to be taken to counter any further Nazi threats to Austrian sovereignty.

From the seaside resort of Ricclone the premier had already set the wheels of Italy's military machine moving last night. Troops are hurrying toward the Austrian frontier along the Alps and garrisons in Northern Italy are making ready to cross the Austrian border at a few hours' notice.

ITALY BEARS BRUNT

If the Great Powers heed Austria's reported plea for intervention to prevent the Nazis from seizing power Italy is expected to bear the brunt of the military effort.

The supposition here is that Italian troops would be the first sent across the border. Contingents from the armies of Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slovakia, both suspicious of Italian aims in Austria, would almost certainly follow to maintain balance in the little republic.

Undoubtedly voicing the government view, the Italian press today was unusually outspoken in commenting upon the events in Vienna yesterday. The newspapers point out that the intervention of Dr. Reth, the German minister at Vienna, in behalf of Chancellor Dollfuss' assassins, is without precedent in diplomatic history.

(Editor's note—Dr. Rieth carried on the negotiations by which the Austrian government at first promised to allow Chancellor Dollfuss' captors free passage to Germany, an agreement later repudiated when it was discovered Dollfuss had been assassinated.)

PRESS OUTSPOKEN

The Messagero says:

"Italy, Great Britain and France will not renounce their solemn undertaking not to tolerate any form of encroachment on Austria."

Premier Mussolini's own paper, Popolo d'Italia, refrains from discussing the international aspects of the Dollfuss assassination, but declares:

"The Vienna outrage was no mass uprising, but simply criminal tyranny. The murder of Chancellor Dollfuss was the gravest of a long series of crimes. It is absolutely necessary for civilization that such methods be stamped out for the safety of Europe."

France Hides Activity Of Armed Forces

By WILLIAM PARKER
International News Service.

PARIS, July 26.—In the face of the formal pose of calm and watchful waiting on the part of the government, suddenly confronted by the Austrian crisis, there is indication of military activity in France this afternoon.

After learning of the mobilization of the entire international police force in the Saar Valley, which is under League of Nations control, International News Service attempted to canvass the situation along the German border this afternoon.

Sources usually informative replied that a ban of secrecy had been imposed and that they were unable to say anything with reference to troop movements or any activities of a military nature.

This was especially true at Thionville, just outside the famous St. Mihiel salient, where the American Army won its first great triumph in France.

Two or three infrantry regiments are always permanently garrisoned there and any forward movement into Germany would center on Thionville and the rich Briey industrial basin. A wall of secrecy hid all military movements in that region today.

Meanwhile the French government is keeping in close contact with the governments of Great Britain, Italy and the Little Entente. France would like to view the Dollfuss affair as an isolated case of assassination but it was emphasized that if the Nazis attempt another coup and it succeeds the situation would be very serious and a course of action against Germany and Austria would have to be decided upon immediately.

London Fears Aroused By Troop Movements

LONDON, July 26.—(AP.)—Great Britain, France and Italy have begun informal negotiations to determine what "sensible action" they may take to uphold their February pact pledging the independence of Austria, it was said today in authoritative British quarters.

Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, called on the Austrian ambassador this afternoon and they held a long discussion on developments. The official purpose of Simon's visit was to express sympathy for the death of Dollfuss.

The exchanges between the Powers have been undertaken although there has been no announcement of a protest by Austria to them or to the League regarding alleged German interference in Austrian internal affairs.

The atmosphere at government buildings was fraught with gravity as events of 20 years ago this week were recalled.

HITLER PROMPT TO DENY GUILT OF GERMANY

Closes Border to Nazis Fleeing Wrath of Austrians

BULLETIN.

MUNICH, Germany, July 26.—(AP.)—A persistent report, still unconfirmed, stated that Chancellor Hitler appeared here today and intervened to prevent a Nai march on Austria, for which all preparations allegely had been made.

By PIERRE HUSS
International News Service.

BERLIN, July 26.—The German government moved swiftly today in an attempt to remove any stigma that might attach to it for the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss and the terrorist acts of Austrian Nazis in Vienna yesterday.

Only a few hours after Chancellor Hitler had returned hurriedly from Bayreuth, where he was attending a Wagnerian festival, Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, foreign minister, sent a telegram of condolences to the Austrian government on behalf of the Reich government.

The telegram was dispatched at 11 o'clock this morning, an hour when Wilhelmstrasse, customarily, is just beginning to awake.

OUSTS ENVOY

On arriving at his office, International News Service learned, Hitler immediately and personally dismissed his ambassador to Austria, Rieth, when he learned that the diplomat had been the one who arranged a guarantee of safe conduct to the German border for the men who captured the Austrian chancellery, including the assassins of Chancellor Dollfuss.

Hitler also ordered the arrest of anybody crossing the border into Germany and it is believed that the ambassador will be returned to Berlin under guard.

Through his personal orders to close down the Austro-German frontier to the plotters and to dismiss Rieth, Hitler believes he has given the world ample proof that Germany is determined to keep out of the domestic affairs of Austria.

GERMANY 'ALOOF'

It is asserted by those close to him that Germany must in any case be kept aloof from the danger of becoming involved in any complications resulting from the situation.

Hitler was quick to size up the situation. He expressed anxiety to those around him. He feels that his own actions in disavowing the Austrian plotters and his sympathy with the Austrians in "their hour of grief" will be instrumental in assuring the world that Germany has not the slightest intention of disturbing European peace.

Although Wilhelmstrasse circles also have heard the rumors of Italian movements on the border, they are inclined to discount any serious intention on the part of Rome to go into Austria.

TYROL PLEDGES AUSTRIAN FAITH

INNSBRUCK, Austria, July 26.—(AP.)—The Tyrolese state government called an extraordinary session this forenoon to "give expression to its sorrow and its abhorence over the vile crimes which resulted in the death of our beloved Chancellor Dollfuss."

The Innsbruck government pledged its honor to continue the Chancellor's work of "building up a free and an independent and happy Austria."

In a telegram to the federal government it demanded the quickest and most severe punishment for all guilty persons. It also ordered all theaters and other places of amusement closed. Mourning services in all country churches were ordered.

Despair Sole Monarch Of Once Gayest Vienna

WASHINGTON, July 26.—(AP.)—What ails Austria?

Men's hands are turned against each other. A chancellor lies dead, pistolled in his chancellery. The world watches, fearing war.

What is the reason?

Austria is a head without a body. War performed that operation—and it is proving no more successful in the politico-economic field than it ever did in the biological.

Before the war Vienna was the world's most brilliant capital—insouciant, sophisticated, savoring the tang of life with a smile. From it—though Budapest was the capital of Austria's partner Hungary—went the royal orders bearing the Hapsburg double eagle. Viennese bankers held sway over the Austro-Hungarian financial realm. The economic life of the empire revolved around Vienna.

There were problems, of course. The diversity of races in the empire taxed the ability of the Hapsburgs to "divide and rule." There were some to say that even then the empire was shaky.

Twenty years ago yesterday Austro-Hungary broke off relations with Serbia. The war came—and then the peace that for Austria was perhaps worse than war.

The old empire boasted more than 50,000,000 people and over 250,000 square miles of territory. When the surgery of the peace treaties was finished, Austria, separated from a dismembered Hungary, had less than 7,000,000 inhabitants, and little more than 30,000 square miles.

Much of the land left her was mountainous, forested, poor for farming. Natural resources were comparatively slender. Around this pitiful remnant, suspicious neighbors began erecting tariff walls.

And in the midst sat the once proud capital, a head without a body. The old empire, despite defects, had provided free trade and a market for Vienna's manufactures. Now the hinterland was inadequate to absorb her products or to feed her population of nearly 2,000,000 and economic rot set in.

HITLER BLAMED IN DOLLFUSS MURDER, KNICKERBOCKER SAYS

WIDOW FAINTS AT SIGHT OF SWASTIKA

U. S. Envoy Visits Bier Of Slain Leader; Mourns Friend

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

VIENNA, July 26.—Hitler has washed his hands of responsibility for the murder of Dollfuss but the Austrian government is determined to pour the blood of their dead chancellor back on German soil.

This is the latest impression the diplomatic corps gathers from the resolution of the Austrian authorities. It now appears that the government, after all, may keep to the letter of their agreement wtih the Nazi insurrectors and shove across the German border all of them except those who acthally assasinated Dollfuss.

This, it is considered here, would be the most effective move Austria could make to show where the responsibility for the murder lies.

GERMANY WASHES HANDS

Germany, on the other hand, is now desperately anxious to clear itself of the charge that Berlin or Munich had anything to do with the crime. According to information of the diplomatic corps here, the German minister, Kurt von Reith, who acted as intermediary between the insurrectionists and the Austrian government and who flew to Berlin today, has been dismissed from the German diplomatic service. His own legation here has put on mourning for Dollfuss.

Furthermore, Berlin has let the Austrian government know that Germany would not honor Von Reith's promise and that Germany would not permit the Nazi rebels to enter the Reich, thus if the Austrian government does intend to shove the Nazis into Germany, it will have to take place at some point where Austrian guards could put them down and bayonet them across into Hitler's country.

WIDOW FAINTS

Dollfuss' widow, Frau Alwine Dollfuss, arrived in Vienna today by airplane from Riccione. As Frau Dollfuss landed at Asperan Field, the first sight that met her eyes was crepe-bordered flags flying in memory of her husband.

She glanced at the black flags. Then at the swastika.

She fainted.

George S. Messersmith, the American Minister to Austria, visited his dead friend today. He alone, among the Austrian diplomatic corps, was invited to view the body of Dolfuss because Messersmith was more than a mere diplomatic envoy in Austria. He was Dollfuss' friend and among all the representatives of foreign powers here, Messersmith was most often called into consultation by the Chancellor.

Dollfuss' body lies in the Chancellor's workroom. His tiny figure looks smaller than ever. His face, which in life always bore marks of overwork, in death has blanched to an inhuman pallor. It showed that his body had been drained of blood.

SAW DOLLFUSS SHOT

At a dramatic midnight session Maj. Emil Fey gave the diplomatic corps the first account of his view of Dollfuss' death. Fey said:

"I saw Dollfuss shot. As the Nazis rushed me through a doorway I heard a shot and caught a glimpse of Dollfuss staggering. Then they forced me away.

"They put me in a room with 12 other high officials, but kept a revolver trained on us, threatening to shoot if a word was spoken. So I could not even tell my colleagues that Dollfuss was shot. It was 3 o'clock before a Nazi officer led me at the point of a revolver to Dollfuss.

"He was lying on a couch, half covered with a tablecloth. He could barely speak. He murmured to me 'Try to straighten this thing out without bloodshed.' Then he barely whispered, 'You are my friend. Please take care of my family.' Then, in a weaker voice, 'Get me a priest.'

"I tried to speak, but a Nazi shoved me out of the room and I did not succeed in saying a word. At the door I cried, 'But get him a doctor'."

Czecho-Slovaks Ask Powers to Intervene

PRAGUE, July 26. — (INS.) — Headed by the Prager Presse, personal organ of Edouard Benes, Czecho-Slovakian foreign minister, the government press today demanded that the powers intervene in Austria as soon as possible to force Germany to guarantee Austria's independence.

PARIS, July 26. — (INS.) — Czecho-Slovakia began reinforcing her troops along the Austrian frontier last night and troop movements were continuing today, according to the Socialist newspaper Le Populaire.

Hungary Imposes Rigid Censorship

BUDAPEST, July 26. — (AP.) — Hungarian authorities took no chances when the news of the putsch in neighboring Austria reached here. Police immediately occupied all the public buildings, particularly those housing radio broadcasting stations.

Frau Dollfuss Mourns At Bier of Husband

Chancellor's Widow Flies to Vienna From Italy

VIENNA, July 26.—(AP.)—Frau Dollfuss, recalled from her vacation in Italy by the assination of her husband, arrived here by airplane today.

She went immediately to a private apartment in the inner city near the chancellery and then visited the room in Ballhausplatz where her husband's body, guarded by four soldiers, lay in state.

President Wlhelm Miklas was there to express to the widow the sympathy of the Austrian government.

Outwardly calm, Frau Dollfuss thanked Miklas and then asked to be left alone with the body of the slain Chancellor.

Utterly unaccompanied, she stood for some time beside the bier.

Rumors that she had suffered an apoplectic attack were denied.

Heartened by the personal encouragement of Premier Mussolini, Frau Dollfuss left the airport at Riccione, Italy, this morning.

Frau Dollfuss was prostrated when she first heard, yesterday, of her husband's death, and Mussolini, who was to have engaged in a political conference with the Austrian Chancellor here this weekend, came at once to offer his assistance.

Premier and Donna Rachele Mussolini offered to care for the Dollfuss children until she decides whether to remain in Vienna or to seek a permanent refuge in Italy.

AUSTRIAN CRISIS FINDS U. S. MUM

WASHINGTON, July 26. — (AP.)—Officialdom, tense and tight-lipped, watched the Austrian cauldron boiling today and tried to guess what it means for the future of European peace.

That the killing of Engelbert Dollfuss, "vest pocket" chancellor, was fraught with danger of serious international repercussions no one doubted from the moment the news first was received.

Secretary Hull and all other officials of the State Department preserved silence. Official dispatches were delayed for hours because of interruption of the communications service from Austria and the confusion in Vienna.

George S. Messersmith, American minister to Austria, finally put through a lone dispatch last night saying all Americans in that troubled city were safe. Mr. Hull awaited fuller dispatches describing the situation in detail.

Austrian Appeal To League Waited

GENEVA, July 26.—(AP.)—The possibility of an appeal to the League of Nations by Austria or some other power as a result of the slaying of Chancellor Dollfuss was discussed in league circles today.

It was pointed out that any member, under Article 11 of the league covenant, may invoke consideration of the Austrian problem as a situation liable to disturb international peace.

SWISS PROTEST NAZI BOMBS

GENEVA, July 26.—(AP.)—A vigorous protest to Berlin against an attempt to smuggle bombs from Germany through the Swiss waters of Lake Constance to Austria Saturday was to be made today by Switzerland.

The minister to Berlin was instructed to act after the government here was informed the shipment was powerful enough to blow up a whole quarter of Vienna.

The incident is officially viewed as the most serious violation of Swiss neutrality since the war.

A flat charge that there was a connection between the attempted smuggling and yesterday's putsch in Vienna was made by the Journal de Geneva.

It said an official Swiss investigation showed that "the young German Nazi smugglers were obeying orders coming from German Leader Gau at Lindau, Bavaria."

The events yesterday in Austria caused much alarm in Switzerland.

'Roman Scandals' Barred in Germany

BERLIN, July 26.—(AP.)—The newspaper Reichsanzeiger announced today that the American motion picture, "Roman Scandals," has been barred from Germany.

Dollfuss Failed Where Hitler Succeeded

Associated Press.

Engelbert Dollfuss failed in what his bitter enemy, Adolf Hitler, thus far has succeeded in doing—ruling by iron force.

After Hitler had ruthlessly suppressed a revolt June 30, Dollfuss said:

"Does not the light at last dawn upon us that one cannot make a people happy with violent methods?"

Within three weeks he was to launch a rigid campaign against his foes—a campaign that had its boomerang in his death.

Hitler and Dollfuss were fellow-countrymen. They flashed into dictatorial ascendancy at nearly the same time. Hitler was born in Austria in 1889, Dollfuss in 1892. Both were of the lower classes.

After the war, in which they fought for the same cause, Hitler dedicated himself to a united Germany. Dollfuss gave his life in opposition to an "anschluss," or union of Austria and Germany.

EARLE PREDICTS HITLER'S END

International News Service.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 26.—The murder of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss means the end of Hitlerism, in the opinion of George H. Earle, former United States minister to Austria, Earle said:

"The brutal death of Chancellor Dollfuss cannot be condoned. It was a despicable act of terrorism that convinces me that the Nazi movement in Austria is cracking up just as it is in Germany."

Earle, who is Democratic candidate for governor of Pennsylvania, was here on a pre-campaign survey when news of Dollfuss' assassination reached this city. He said:

"Terrorism is now the only resort of the Hitlerites—and it is bound to fail."

"Austria now cannot go Nazi without a European war."

He declared that neither Italy nor France would stand for it, adding:

AUSTRIAN ENVOY FLAYS NAZIS

GENEVA, July 26.—(AP.)—Baron De Pflugl, permanent delegate of Austria to the League of Nations, today attributed the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss to "Nazi gangsters" and expressed the belief there is no possibility of the Nazis taking over power in Austria.

Pflugl, now in the Swiss Engadine near the Austrian border, said over the telephone he has had no instructions concerning a possible presentation of Austrian problems to the League of Nations. He said:

"I do not know the intentions of other powers, but I presume the Austrian tragedy will have repercussions upon their foreign policies."

The baron added there is no revolution in Austria, and that the people of the nation are content with the existing regime which he predicted will endure under the new chiefs of the state.

SOVIET BLAMES GERMAN NAZIS

MOSCOW, July 26. — (AP.) — German Nazis were blamed by the Soviet press today for Austrian Nazis' unsuccessful attempt to seize the Vienna government.

Za Industrializatzu, the organ of the Commissariat of Heavy Industry, said:

"Germans Nazis cannot convince anyone they are not responsible for the action of Austrian Nazis, as the use of a radio station in Germany by Austrian Nazis confirms the responsibility of German Fascists."

The paper says the Austrian debacle undoubtedly will "make worse German-Italian relations," as Italy will not remain an "indifferent observer of the struggle between the Nazis and the Austrian government." Indications are France will support Italian representations to Berlin, the newspaper added.

LINK ARMY MEN AS ASSASSINS

International News Service.

VIENNA, July 26.—The identity of the assassin of Chancellor Dollfuss has not yet been made known officially, but International News Service learns that one of the chief leaders was a man named Friedrich, a former corporal in the army.

When he led the troops into the chancellory he wore the uniform of a major.

The second assasin was believed to be named Holzweber, a former sergeant. He was dressed as a captain.

The police are maintaining extreme secrecy about the assassins, but it is believed this is because one or more of them came from the active police corps.

POPE DEPLORES ASSASSINATION

VATICAN CITY, July 26. — (AP.)—Pope Pius expressed deep grief today over the "criminal assassination" of Chancellor Dollfuss in a lengthy telegram to President Wilhelm Miklas of Austria. The Pope's message said:

"I take the liveliest part in the profound sorrow brought upon you, upon beloved Austria and the whole civilized world by the criminal assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss.

"We render homage to the memory of a worthy Christian figure, this most loyal son of the church and this valorous defender of his country. And having recommended his noble soul to heaven, we beg from heaven for real peace for Catholic Austria, and in particular to you we impart our benevolent benediction."

The pontiff through Cardinal Pacelli also sent condolences to Frau Dollfuss. He assurred her he was "praying for Divine comfort" for her children and gave them his blessing. He eulogized Dollfuss as a Christian and a patriot.

Prelates of Vatican City said no other event which they can recall since the present Pontiff ascended to his throne has so thorough stirred him.

Hindenburg Sends Message of Grief

BERLIN, July 26. — (INS.) — President Paul von Hindenburg, Germany's aged President, today sent the following telegram to President Wilhelm Miklas, of Austria:

"I am deeply shaken by the news concerning Chancellor Dollfuss because he was the victim of a detestable attempt. I express to your excellency my heartfelt sympathy."

DOLLFUSS SLAIN LIKE BANDIT, DIES HERO

Shot Down Facing Ten Assailants; Denied Church Rites

(Editor's Note—How Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, of Austria, died alone with his bitter enemies, refused even the solace of religious rites, is graphically told in the following dispatch by H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service roving correspondent in Europe. It is the first complete story of the tragic events of yesterday in Vienna's chancellery.)

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
International News Service.

VIENNA, July 26.—They killed Dollfuss like gangsters. They put their victim on the spot. His Nazi murderers did worse. They shot him twice and let him bleed to death slowly.

It took him five hours to die. They refused to let doctors go to him, refused to let a priest see him.

Dollfuss, whom the Vatican regarded as perhaps the greatest Catholic politician in the world, had to die without benefit of clergy because his brutal murderers would not grant him even that.

As the "Little Chancellor's" body lay today on a bier in the Ballhausplatz, details of his murder made it clear that the Nazi killers behaved with the philosophy of Mexican bandits.

DOLLFUSS BRAVE

Dollfuss was a brave man. He was one of the most valorous officers in the Austrian army. He did not run. He faced the murderers — 10 of them — single handed.

The Nazis fell upon one unarmed man.

According to eye-witness accounts, Dollfuss got the first alarm when his servant, hearing a tumult in the hall outside his door, closed and locked it. The servant and Dollfuss then ran to the so-called Congress Hall, where the famous Congress of Vienna sat a century ago.

They had hardly reached the hall when 10 men beat in the door with rifle butts and stormed in.

Their leader flung himself upon Dollfuss and, holding a revolver close to him, fired twice.

SHOT TWICE

One shot struck Dollfuss in the neck, the other in the shoulder. Dollfuss remained standing for a moment, then brought both hands up before his face and fell backward to the floor.

Lying there he cried twice:

"Help! Help!"

Then he became unconscious.

The murderers let him lie there a while. Then one of them dragged him onto a divan and covered his face with a towel.

They thought him dead.

Later Maj. Emil Fey was permitted to come to Dollfuss for a moment. By that time the chancellor had recovered consciousness long enough to murmur:

"Don't let there be any bloodshed."

These were almost his last words.

About 5 o'clock he died.

The Nazis refused to call a physician. It is barely possible that medical attention might have saved his life, but it is now evident that the first intention of the Nazis was to kill Dollfuss and that they cared more about that than for the larger project of seizing the government.

CATHOLICS INCENSED

Catholic Austria is particularly incensed at the refusal of the Nazis to let Dollfuss have a priest to administer extreme unction. This touch of callous cruelty has deeply affected the Catholic population.

The Nazis killed the Chancellor, but they made him a more effective enemy than he ever was in life. Ironically the German legation today placed the swastika flag of Hitler at half-mast.

An officer of the Heimwehr bitterly remarked:

Associated Press.

A living model for all heroes of melodrama, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg brings fire, dash and romance to the turbulent Austrian scene.

Barely 35, this outspoken, steel-willed young descendant of the fighting count E.R. von Starhemberg, who stubbornly held Vienna against the Turks 251 years ago, started young on his road to power.

He was with Hitler, the man he now opposes, in the now famed Munich "beer putsch" in 1923. During the ensuing decade—up to the very day he took the reins of government from the hands of little Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss, the martyred 'Milimetternich" (Tiny Metternich)—his career was to be inextricably interlaced with that of Hitler.

LOVE FOR COMBAT

His love for combat he got from his fighting ancestors, and civil war and revolution were his lot.

After fighting with the German insurgents in Upper Silesia, the youthful prince returned to the vast estates he had inherited and began welding together the Iron Guard that was to back his every move in the complicated Austrian political game.

He outfitted 800 of his feudal retainers with uniforms, feather caps and slogans, and skillfully inserted the little unit into the growing Heimwehr organization, assuming supreme command. His ability at organization enabled him to unite the "Verbund Deutsche Wehr," the "Bund Oberland" and the scholars corps into the "Jaegercorps Wienz." And he was away on the road toward power.

BREAK OVER JEWS

His refusal to inject the anti-Semetic issue into Austrian politices, however, led to an open break with Hitler. He said:

"The Jewish question is an international one: It cannot be settled by one nation."

Later he was to call Hitler a man of "illegitimate birth who happens to speak German," and refer to the Nazis as "brown murder beat."

A comic opera "putsch" in 1931 led to his arrest, and he was fined $28. He bounced right back up, however, with threats to march on Vienna if the government failed to accept his program for economic rehabiliation of the country.

Thereafter young Von Starhemberg busied himself strengthening his "Iron Guard" and his own position. He flew to Italy, studied Fascism, earned Mussolini's liking and respect. He recommended—and his advice was to be taken when Dollfuss proclaimed Austria's new constitution early this year—that his country adopt the Italian form of government.

JOINS DOLLFUSS

All this time he had been swinging first to support of Dollfuss. Then to opposition. Final alliance came late last year, when Starhemberg joined his forces with Dollfuss' "Fatherland Front," the sole legal political party in Austria, and became vice-fuehrer or vice-chancellor of the single front.

The Iron Guard co-operated with regular troops and police in putting down the putsch that brought death to Dollfuss.

That had been expected. Starhemberg, made vice chancellor May 1 as the new constitution was proclaimed and left in that post when Dollfuss shook up his cabinet this month, was the little chancellor's logical successor.

But many observers thought his designation extremely significant. He had long been friendly to the ousted Hapsburg monarchy, had reviewed his 8,000 Heimwehrmen in company with Archduke Otto as thousands cheered for Otto's return as king, and there had been rumors Starhemberg might assume the regency.

YOUNG PRINCE SHY

However that may be, the Heimwehr movement, it was admitted, had become a nimportant force in Austria, and Starhemberg's policies, considered in conjunction with his friendship with Mussolini, were regarded as likely to influence the history of Central Europe.

The young prince—typical aristocrat, boyish, friendly, even shy—belies his reputation as man of "action." "Democracy" he holds in slight esteem, usually linking the work to "corruption," and he has battled steadily to eliminate democtatic forms from the Austrian government, although he himself once sat in parliament.

He was born in 1899 in Efferding, Upper Austria, studied at the universities of Munich and Innsbruck and launched his career of battles immediately after his school days were ended.

His mother, Princess Starhemberg, for long was an executive in Dollfuss' Christian-Socialist party that preceded the "Fatherland Front," at the same time her tall, impetuous son was busily striving to throw all political parties into the historical ashcan.

SEEK TO OUST LANGER AIDE

BISMARCK, N. D., July 26.—(AP.)—Ouster proceedings similar to those which drove William Langer from the governor's chair, were directed in the North Dakota Supreme Court today at another convicted official, Highway Commissioner Frank Vogel.

Sharing attention with the attempt to remove Vogel was a debt moratorium declaration issued yesterday by Acting Gov. Ole H. Olson, under which no person can be evicted from his home or business for inability to pay.

Every form of debt, with exception of those in which the federal government is creditor, is included in the moratorium. The acting Governor under the proclamation is made the court of last resort for a creditor who believes himself injured by the order.

A petition filed yesterday in behalf of Olson in the high court asked that a writ of quo warranto be issued against Vogel, challenging his right to continue in office in the face of his conviction with Langer and three others of conspiracy to defraud the United States government through solicitation of funds from federal relief workers.

FEY DESCRIBES NAZI COUP

International News Service.

VIENNA, July 26.—The text of the radio speech delivered last night by Maj. Emil Fey, commissar for emergency under the new government, describing the tragic events in the chancellery yesterday, was made public today. It said in part:

"We were having a council of ministers at 11 a. m., at the chancellery in Ballhausplatz. At 11:16 a report was brought into our room stating that action against the government was being prepared at the Heimwehr barracks at the Siebensterzasse.

"At the moment when the sheet of paper on which this message had been sent was brought into the room we saw a number of private automobiles occupied by heavily armed soldiers—or persons at least appearing to be soldiers—drive up to the door of the government palace.

"In practically no time they forced their way into the council room, headed by three ringleaders, who appeared in the uniform of a major of the army, a captain of the army and a colonel of the police force.

"At the point of a revolver they forced the chancellor together with the under-secretary of state for public security, Karl Karwinsky, to leave the room, and then again with their pistols they forced me and my other colleagues of the government to go to a small room adjoining the council room.

"At 2:30 a patrol asked us to go over and meet the chancellor. We found Dollfuss there heavily wounded on a sofa, and he asked us to look after his family when he was dead and to inform the other members of the government that he had been killed.

"We were then escorted to our room again and had to spend three and a half agonizing hours there, during which the Nazis, armed with rifles, threatened several times to kill us."

EX-STAGE STAR DIES VAGRANT

PATERSON, N. J., July 26.—A vagrant who died from alcoholism here yesterday was identified by police finger prints as "Billy" Montgomery—famous vaudeville headliner of 20 years ago.

William Montgomery, with his former wife, Florence Moore, toured the world at $2,000 per week. No greater trouping couple ever stepped before the footlights. Then "Billy" started using drugs.

He rode swiftly to oblivion and became a shaky, thin, unshaven creature—a ghost of his former greatness—panhandling at Rialto stage doors. "Billy" had to have cocaine. Finally he stooped to shoplifting in an effort to procure cash for the white powder.

After Florence Moore divorced Montgomery, whose real name was William J. Clarkson, he married the widow of Claxton Wilstach in 1918.

The N. V. A. Fund claimed the body. Funeral services will be held Friday with interment in the N. V. A. plot at Kensico Cemetery.

Her father and mother, it is said, had refused her permission to go out with a Monessen boy.

MOONEY AGAIN SEEKS PARDON

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—(AP.)—Another application for a pardon has been signed by Thomas J. Mooney, serving a life prison sentence for the 1916 San Francisco Preparedness Day bombing, Attorney Leo Gallagher said here today.

The application, one of two moves being made in Mooney's behalf, will be forwarded to Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, of California, at Sacramento, Gallagher said. Four previous Governors have refused similar applications.

Mooney's attempt to seek relief through the federal courts under habeas corpus proceedings met a second setback yesterday. Judge William H. Sawtelle, of the United States District Court of Appeals, denied Mooney the right to appeal from a decision of the Federal District Court. Attorneys for the life-term convict said the original habeas corpus petition, rejected in the District Court, will be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Fazio Loses Plea For New Bomb Trial

In an opinion handed down today, Judge Samuel R. Gardner refused a new trial for Philip Fazio and Nick Casiolo. He deferred sentence for one week until the return of Casiolo's attorney to the city.

Fazio was found guilty by a jury in connection with the bombing last April of the home of Dr. George Felix, Swissvale councilman, who had been campaigning against rackets. Several years ago he was acquitted of the "beer barrel" murder.

NEWS WRITERS RETURN TO JAIL

DANVILLE, Ky., July 26.—(AP.)—Jack Durham and Wesley Carty, young newspapermen who have refused on three occasions to tell the Danville Police Court about their advance information on a hanging in effigy, went back to jail late yesterday to serve another six hours. Judge J. W. Harlan ordered them to appear in court again today.

After a hearing yesterday, at which Durham and Carty repeated their refusal to disclose their information on the ground that it was given them in confidence, Judge Harlan said:

"Well, boys, if this is going to be an endurance contest, I can stand it. You understand that this is a challenge to the court."

Durham and Carty served a jail sentence Tuesday of three hours. Monday they were fined $10. Judge Harlan each time held them in contempt of his court because they refused to tell what they knew about the hanging in effigy of State Representative J. Sterling Towles. The Danville authorities' position is that the affair was a breach of the peace.

RIFT LOOMING OVER STEEDLE CANDIDACY

By MARK SHIELDS

Protest is growing in the Twelfth legislative district against the continuance on the Republican ticket of Representative Joseph G. Steedle, of McKees Rocks, a candidate for re-election.

Representative Steedle yesterday was refused a new trial on charges of election fraud conspiracy growing out of the 1932 campaign. He was convicted by a jury in Federal Court.

It is this situation which has led to the demand for Steedle's withdrawal from the legislative race.

According to present plans, Squire A. W. McMillen, of Carnegie, named by Republican County Chairman William H. Coleman as legislative chairman for the Twelfth district, will be appealed to by other candidates in the district to urge Steedle's retirement. If Steedle refuses, then the case will be laid before Coleman.

BOLT THREATENED

Should Steedle then decline to step aside—and there is nothing but moral and political suasion to compel him—at least one, more than likely two, and perhaps all three of the other Republican candidates in the Twelfth District not only will refuse to campaign with him, but will renounce any desire to have him re-elected. There is strong language in the tentative draft of a letter which already has been prepared for submission to McMillen.

Decision to draft the letter followed an invitation by McMillen to the four legislative candidates to meet with him and plan a joint campaign. Kenneth Ketchum and John R. Haudenshield are understood to have declined, and the position of John M. O'Rourke has not yet been made clear, though on general principles he is understood to have the same sentiments as his two running mates.

KETCHUM BITTER

Ketchum, a candidate on the Independent as well as the Republican ticket, has prepared a letter to his constituents in which he minces no words on the subject of Steedle. In it he says:

"I plan to continue my active campaign as an individual, at least until the time when I can secure a definite understanding from the other nominees on these two tickets as to their willingness and agreement to support a program of effective and enlightened social and fiscal legislation in the next legislative session and especially so until a successor on the Republican ticket to Dr. J. G. Steedle is named."

Steedle is aware of this sentiment, and is reported to have said that he would campaign alone, and would be re-elected. Should he reverse his position and retire, another candidate would be selected by the members of the Republican County Committee from the Twelfth District.

In the past two legislative sessions Steedle has been chairman of the powerful Appropriations Committee. He has been the House floor leader for Senator James J. Coyne, and his legislative record is a reflection of the desires of the Oakland Senator.

Sentence of Steedle Others Delayed

In denying motions for a new trial for Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, McKees Rocks Assemblyman, and four co-defendants, convicted of conspiring to violate the election laws in the 1932 congressional election, Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker set no date for calling the convicted men for sentence.

The date for sentence probably will be designated upon the return of First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh, who is on vacaion. In addition to Dr. Steedle, those denied new trials were Justice of the Peace James J. Westwood, of McKees Rocks; Justice of the Peace Paul N. Franks, of Scott Township; Thomas Saunders, Stowe Township police official, and Wallace Ray, a state employe.

They were convicted May 24. Seven others were acquitted. Arguments on the motions were heard July 17 by Judge Schoonmaker. The court also denied the motions for arrest of judgment. None of the defense counsel was in court when the court ruled on the motions.

After imposition of sentences, the defense, it is expected, will file appeals with the United States Circuit Court. Under the statute of which they were tried and convicted there is a maximum penalty of 10 years' imprisonment and a $5,000 fine, or both.

'Hexing' in Bellevue

Pertinent views in Bellevue as police today unraveled the mystery of an alleged witchcraft spell revealed with the arrest of a young widow, Mrs. E. Donovan, 34, mother of five.

bors' yards and the sprinkling of chicken soup over "accursed" areas.

Postal inspectors were informed of the case because two letters were sent through the mails.

WARNING GIVEN

The disclosure of the suspected "hex" scheme occurred shortly after midnight when neighbors called the police after the six-foot high cross was set ablaze in a vacant lot adjoining the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Spang, across the street from Mrs. Donovan's.

Investigation by the police revealed that on numerous occasions recently, Mrs. Spang had discovered a trail of salt leading to her front porch. Later she found a large darning needle inserted in the door-sill of her front door, pointing upward.

Then, only a few days ago, she noticed two lilies had been clipped from the flower garden around her house.

The Spangs, the police said, were still perplexed by these strange occurrences when, on Tuesday, they received a letter, which read:

"There's going to be a cross demonstration Wednesday eve—25/-34—please keep your car out of the lot between 12 and 1 a. m. Signed KKK. This means business."

CROSS FIRED

A similar letter, but in different handwriting, according to the police, was received at the same time by Paul Sullivan, 19, of 694 Shade street, son of the Bellevue postmaster.

Both young Sullivan and Spang parked their cars at night in the vacant lot.

Last night, they did not park their cars there. At midnight, while the neighbors watched, a man approached the vacant lot from the rear, bearing a wooden cross. He stuck it in the ground, ignited it and fled.

Police, summoned by the neighbors, later arrested a man a short distance from the vacant lot.

Mrs. Donovan and her five young children occupy one-half of a house, the other part of which is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. John A. Mulqueen, at 720 Shade street. Mulqueen is an auditor for the Pittsburgh Railways Company.

The Mulqueens, the police said, also discovered salt sprinkled on their porch.

Following the burning of the cross, an information charging Mrs. Donavan with disorderly conduct was issued by Justice of the Peace Elmer T. Greiner today, on which Bellevue police took the woman into custody. She will be given a hearing tonight.

MURREN HEADS POLICE CHIEFS

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—George W. Murren, Allegheny County detective head, is the new chief of Pennsylvania's police chiefs.

The state association elected him president at its annual convention yesterday and named F. J. Eckhart, Wilkes-Barre; George J. Shoemaker, Harrisburg, and William J. Kane, Mt. Lebanon, as vice presidents.

F. B. Titus, Lansdowne, was chosen secretary; M. H. Bernhard, Allentown, treasurer; C. W. Rhoades, Northumberland, sergeant-at-arms; W. E. Mair, Pittsburgh, and D. T. McKelvey, Wilkes-Barre, executive committeemen.

Maj. Lynn G. Adams, superintendent of state police, will address the convention today.

REALTY BOARDS TO ASSEMBLE

Several members of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board will attend a meeting of Western Pennsylvania realty boards tomorrow at the Summit Hotel, near Uniontown.

Addressing the meeting tomorrow will be Congressman J. Buell Snyder and L. G. Lichliter, manager of the Johnstown district of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation.

Congressman Snyder is to explain the National Housing Act, and Lichliter is to discuss the Home Owners Loan Corporation. The Uniontown Real Estate Board, host at the meeting, has arranged a golf tournament for the visitors.

MORALS JURY SPLIT LOOMS

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—Eight men and four women still battled today over the fate of Dave Allen and Gloria Marsh, Hollywood figures who went on trial one and one-half weeks ago on morals charges, with court attaches predicting the jury would be unable to agree.

So far as the defendants, court officials and spectators knew, the jury was no nearer a verdict today than when it began deliberation late Tuesday.

The state alleges Allen and Miss Marsh participated in a scandalous party last April 26 in the apartment of June De Long, film extra and possessor of "Hollywood's most beautiful hands." Allen contends he and Miss Marsh are victims of a "frameup."

Superior Judge B. Rey Schauer announced last night he would poll the panel unless a verdict is forthcoming before 5 p. m. today. If he feels there is no chance of a decision, he said he will discharge the jurors and declare a mistrial. Decision as to whether the defendants should be retried then would be in the hands of the District Attorney.

PUPPY 5 DAYS SEWER CAPTIVE RESCUED

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 26.—(AP.)—Pal, the little dog they'd given up for dead, was back today.

His feet swollen twice their normal size, covered with mud and weak from hunger, the 4-months-old Russian police dog was rescued last night from a street sewer in which he had been trapped five days.

GETS INTO TRAP

Pal and another little dog toppled into the sewar last Friday and their cries attracted the attention of children in the neighborhood. The other animal was rescued by removing the sewer cover, but Pal, in his fright, had threshed about until he became entrapped in the manhole, 25 feet back from the entrance.

His owner, Thornton Ryder, neighbors and children worked unceasingly throughout the night to get to him. The next day the city street department contributed their efforts.

The dog's whines were the only evidence that he was alive. They grew weaker, and Monday they ceased entirely. They called his name. But there was no answer.

FOUND BY GIRL

Last night a neighbor's girl, unwillingly to believe that their companion was dead, leaned over the manhole and called.

There was a faint whine.

She ran to the Ryder home, and a final attempt to get to the animal was started.

When the cover was removed, there was Pal within reach. The little dog, in a supreme effort, had dragged his body from the narrow pipe, partially filled with water, to the entrace of the manhole.

Veterinarians said he would probably recover.

BOY AX SLAYER FOUND GUILTY

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—Convicted of murder for the ax slaying of his mother and brother, Louis Rude Payne, 21-year-old student, faced another Superior Court trial today—a trial in which a jury will decide whether he is sane.

Late yesterday he was found guilty of hacking to death his mother, Mrs. Carrie L. Payne, and brother, Robert. The jurors made no recommendation, leaving Payne to be hanged unless he is found to have been insane at the time of the double slaying.

Payne, son of a former St. Louis utilities executive, Lucius F. Payne, said he committed the crime because of an "irresistible impulse."

HONOLULU GAY WAITING COMING OF ROOSEVELT

International News Service.

ABOARD U. S. S. HOUSTON, OFF HAWAII, July 26.—President Roosevelt, en route to Honolulu, today completed membership of the railroad retirement board, appointing John T. Williamson, of Chicago, to represent carriers, and Lee M. Eddy, of St. Louis, to represent employes.

Meanwhile, Honolulu's mixed population of 83,000 anxiously awaited the arrival in Pearl Harbor of President Roosevelt.

The royal Hawaiian band, a group of musicians that has existed since monarchial days, and native women singers, will greet Mr. Roosevelt with the traditional "Aloha," welcome song of the islands.

Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter is accompanying the President up the coral reef Hamakua Coast from Hilo, 150 miles to the south.

Mr. Roosevelt was interested in news dispatches relating to the assassination of Chancellor Dollfuss, but made no comment.

The famed Waikiki Beach, three miles from the center of Honolulu and within the protecting arm of Diamond Head, was lined with dark-browned native surf-board riders this morning. Hundreds of other native boys have gayly decorated their outrigged canoes to join the celebration.

King street, the main thoroughfare paralleling the beach and connecting with highways that circle the island of Oahu, was arched with American flags.

It was a holiday in the "biggest city of the islands."

Mr. Roosevelt was the first President of the United States ever to set foot on the islands when he disembarked yesterday at Hilo.

COLLEGE PREXY SOCKS PARSON

ATLANTA, July 26.—(AP.)—Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, widely known Atlanta minister, and Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University, came to blows yesterday in the latter's office.

Dr. Dodge demanded immediate payment of $200 and charged the university president with discriminating against him in the matter of salary.

Dr. Dodge, reluctant to discuss the incident, said the exchange of blows followed conversation about "a very personal matter." He had a thin scratch on his face. Dr. Jacobs was unmarked. Dr. Jacobs said:

"Dr. Dodge has been a part-time professor-employe of Oglethorpe University and since October, 1933, has been paid the sum of $1,025 in addition to the free education of his two children and his daily lunch on the campus."

SCHOOL CLOSING FOES ASK AID

Individual councilmen will support residents of Becks Run in opposing the Board of Public Education's plans to close the Beck's Run School, Council President Robert Garland has promised a committee from that district.

The committee appeared yesterday asking aid, but was told that it is not Council's policy to interfere with the actions of the school board.

Committee members, in asking a hearing, declared they had not been given a satisfactory hearing by the school board. They were John T. Guest, Robert Dyer, Mrs. Emma Page, Mrs. Elizabeth Nichol and Mrs. Sarah Miller.

Elliott and Wife Stay in Adirondacks

CANAJOHRIE, N. Y., July 26.—(AP.)—Elliott Roosevelt, son of the resident, and Mrs. Roosevelt have taken a cottage at Canada Lake, in the Eastern Adirondacks, for the remainder of the summer.

The cottage, in a wild section in the Gloversville area, adjoins that of Mr. and Mrs. Park Sowden, of Palatine Bridge, aunt and uncle of Mrs. Roosevelt. With them is Mrs. Roosevelt's mother, Mrs. Ruth Swiler Goggins, of Fort Worth, Tex.

Roosevelt's Mother Tells Paris About Son

PARIS, July 26.—(AP.)—Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, had her first experience at speaking over the radio at a luncheon given for her today by the American Women's Club.

She spoke both English and French, the latter with an excellent accent that surprised her hearer. Her subject was "My Son." She said she hoped he was listening in Honolulu.

Accused as Race 'Bookie,' Fined $2

Arrested yesterday in an alleged bookmaking headquarters at the rear of 221 Federal street, Adam Probeleski, 49, of Ambridge, was fined $2 with the option of two days in jail today by Magistrate J. W. McGowan in Central Police Court.

Swissvale Child Hit by Automobile

Struck by an auto in Woodstock avenue, near her home, last night, Florence Mitchell, 5, of 7542 Calumet street, Swissvale, was in Braddock General Hospital today with head and leg injuries. Kenneth Shumacher, 238 Lobinger avenue, North Braddock, was the driver, police said.

Auto Trailer Solves Rent and Taxes For McGarvins

A license fee for their auto trailer is equivalent to both house rent and taxes for Mr. and Mrs. W. E. McGarvin—present address, 90 Hazelwood avenue, Hazelwood.

Their trailer, a small home on wheels, is parked there on a vacant lot, and it is possible, McGarvin says, that they will stay the winter.

But when the spirit moves them, it is only the work of a few moments to pull in the steps and to hitch up the trailer to their car. And they're ready to move on—away from the depression.

Since then, he and his wife have wandered. Twice they visited Florida, and when Georgia set the price of license tags at $3, they stayed three months.

Some years ago, McGarvin was a jewelry and loan shop keeper. Now he earns his way down every highway. Just now his trade is repairing lawn mowers.

Freedom is one of the big reasons for their life on a trailer. As McGarvin says:

"My wife and I are happy on the go—stopping when we please. Jiggs, the dog here, is our only passenger. And if we don't like our neighbors, we can pack up and leave them."

'Mail Divorce' Ruled Illegal on Coast

LOS ANGELES, July 26.—(AP.)—A marriage that followed a Mexican divorce was annulled by Superior Judge Leon Yankwich, who termed the decree a "postal card divorce" and described it as a "fraud, a snare and a delusion."

The marriage was that of James Marlin Hall and Elizabeth R. Hall. Judge Yankwich held it never was a valid marriage because Hall's Mexican divorce from Virginia Hobbs Hall, "Miss Memphis" of 1923 and four times winner of international beauty contests, was not legal.

THREATS SENT MINE OWNER

JOHNSTOWN, July 26.—(AP.)—Until police complete their investigation of a series of threatening notes he has received, E. W. Garman, Asheville mine operator, has sent his wife and two young daughters to visit friends in Bedford, Pa.

Garman was injured severely recently by assailants who ambushed him in a mine shed after he had received several of the notes. He was robbed of $100 in another attack a year ago.

Yesterday he found another note pinned on the shed. It read:

COMPENSATION ABUSES LAID TO POLITICS

The Pennsylvania Workmen's Compensation Act Administration today stands accused by the Consumers' League of Pennsylvania of corruption shot through with politics.

Untold numbers of workers are denied benefits of the law while others are robbed of their full claims, the league charges.

The league also says that employers who relied on insurance to cover their responsibilities find themselves saddled wi the compensation charges of their injured workers because of failure of insurance companies, or see inpustice done to their workers because of the successful contesting of cases where the insurance companies are "past masters and the workers are por. ignorant of litigation and often without counsel."

ADDED RELIEF BURDEN

Another wrong, according to the league, is that citizens are taxed to support such workers on relief, overburdening charitable and relief institutions.

The league claims that hospitals are hard pressed to give free medical care to cases which should be paid for by insurance companies.

"A grand pawn in politics" is the way the league describes the personnel of the workmen's compensation division of the Department of Labor and Industry. Gov. Pinchot is blamed for faulty execution of the law.

Incompetence and laxity in the law's enforcement deserves the name "racketeering," the league says.

PROOF DECLARED FOUND

The complaints against the administration of the law are contained in a pamphlet authored by Estelle Lauder, executive secretary of the organization.

In the pamphlet's section devoted to Gov. Pinchot, it is said the committee he appointed in 1933 to study the law's administration and make suggestions found proof of maladministration but made no changes in the administrative staff.

Civil service regulations to govern the choice of employes of the compensation staff is recommended by the league.

The pamphlet describes the political affiliations of the three members of the compensation board in its charges that the board is steeped in politics. The members are Arthur C. Dale, Edward J. Hunter and William J. Burchinal.

U. S. Bureaucracy Breeding Host of Citizen-Snoopers, Declares Richard W. Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

WHAT about the governmental policy, which appears to be growing, of buying "citizen co-operation" by offering rewards for snooping?

"Snoop nests" flourish in direct ratio to the growth of a bureaucracy which issues "COMMANDMENTS" and "REGULATIONS" instead of LAWS, instead of laws which provide some appeal—an appeal to the courts rather than to the group which made the "commandment" from which there is no appeal!

"SNOOP NESTS" are breeding in the federal government probably more than the President knows, flocks of blackbird snoopers and black mailing vultures looking for guilt among the innocent as well as among the guilty. This is bad enough when the snoopers are on the government payroll—it is worse when the snoopers are citizens who are egged on to become informers at a price.

It is worse because citizenship worth anything SHOULD BE EDUCATED TO ACT WITHOUT BEING BOUGHT. To buy some citizens to be snoopers and informers is to offer a money reward to all citizens to put up their patriotism, their law-abidingness, their loyalty, their co-operation and their honor on the auction block.

Rewards for the apprehension of dangerous criminals may be excepted from this conclusion on the ground that the citizen who earns the reward really earns it just as the red girl may have earned hers, heroine or no heroine. But it is still clear that any government policy which creates a general "paid informer" citizenship is of bad service to educate us to SOUND citizenship. Sound citizenship owes it to Uncle Sam to be his own brother—MINUS THE TIN-CUP, THE TIP, THE HERE'S YOURS!

BESIDES—we learned it during prohibition—the chance to be an "informer" is usually transformed into the chance to be a blackmailer. This is bad enough when the informer-blackmailer is a snooper for breaches of law; it is worse when he is an informer-blackmailer for supposed breaches of bureau regulations and petty official commandments.

Realize, as we who are looking on at Washington realize, that the informer-blackmailer may say to the innocent man, manufacturer, labor leader or other citizen:

"Boy! I'm going to report you. Maybe, you'll get by, maybe not. Remember you can't appeal to any judge or jury. If they happen not to like you in the bureau, I can put your affair is on ice anyhow. What's it worth, old top?"

Already it is advertised that Uncle Sam will divide with, or sweeten the tongue of, or put a wreath upon the brow of informers of:

Customs violations—even petty ones. Tariff custom informing has become a profession.

Income tax evasion or mistakes.

AAA farmer crop reports—false or alleged false—encouraging by circulars farmers to be snoopers on their neighbors.

NRA code violations or alleged violations—directly encouraging, by posters and advertising, manufacturers and laborers or any one to snoop for complaints.

PASTE it in your hat that an Uncle Sam who BUYS INFORMATION AND INFORMERS, INSTEAD OF BUILDING UP OUR CITIZENSHIP, CORRUPTS CITIZENSHIP.

AND THAT FOR EVERY INFORMER HE WILL GET, HE WILL BREED A HUNDRED SNOOPING LOW - DOG BLACKMAILERS.

The machinery in Washington for catching wrong-doers has been for years—even before the New Deal commandments—in need of repair. But that repair, the farsighted minds in Washington know, will not be found in subsidizing our population into a flock of stool pigeons whose biggest rewards will be found in extorting something from the innocent as well as from the guilty.

Nor, under American tradition, can any system be justified that gives petty officials the right to receive and bring as pressure, cheap accusations which have all the poison and no more justice than the cheapest, shyster, blackmailing, reputation-blasting, breach of promise suits.

DILLINGER LAID '6 FEET UNDER' IN STORM

By JACK LAIT
International News Service.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 26.—John Dillinger, at last where he won't break out, lies under the sod of his native Indianapolis, buried both in body and public interest. The height of morbidity which inspired civilized Chicagoans, on the night he was shot, to dip papers telling of his death in his still wet blood in the alley beside the Biograph Theater for lifelong souvenirs, has fizzled down to where the bandit genius who robbed 27 banks in 59 days is the forgotten man.

The elements contributed, but the dicisive factor came when, at the gates of the cemetery wherein Dillinger was being interred between his mother, Molly, and his step-mother, Lizzie, the newsboys were crying:

"Extra—Dollfuss Shot!"

LAVENDER-HUED CASKET

Thousands of curious ones were fooled, as the newspaper men were not, by the formal announcement of the burial set for this morning. We knew, but they herded us to the east gate where 20 police held us outside a locked portcullis, as through the west gate they wheeled the hearse that bore the lavender-hued casket which looked more as though it had been designed to bear the remains of a chorus girl than of the toughest killer, jail-breaker and robber of our times.

After the oceans of ink and acres of photographs which had told the people of all lands about Dillinger, the family suddenly became retiring, and every subterfuge was utilized to prevent reporters and cameramen from approaching him since we ended our fantastic ride behind the Mooresville funeral truck from the North Side of Chicago to that village, 206 miles distant, through a blazing and deadly heat, unnoticed by the millions who were then so Dillinger-minded that bricks were being torn out of the Biograph Theater alley near where he fell, to be sold, and telegrams were pouring into Mooresville with offers to his father of sums up to $10,000 for his body.

BURIED IN RAIN

The roads between Mooresville and Maywood, where Mrs. Aubrey Hancock, his sister, was housing the coffined clay in her front parlor, had been alive with traffic all night. Many waited three and four hours to pass by the house, though all was dark within.

Then came the coup, the sudden loading of the casket and its unanticipated drive with only a few nondescript cars carrying the family and the newspapermen following it, and Dillinger was buried with only a handful of the interested millions knowing about it.

The heavy rainstorm drove even these back to shelter. The minister cut his sermon to perfunctory length and platitudinous text—and, outside, where word had spread and a few people were trickling toward the cemetery, the newsboys were shouting:

"Extra! Dollfuss shot!"

That, in the language of Dillingers:

"Washes him up."

SIX FEET UNDER

The terror of police and hero of waitresses is six feet under the ground. Not far from where he lies rest the bodies of a President and two Vice Presidents of the nation which ran him down. Half a dozen gun molls, three of whom were permitted the intimacy of being in the family group, mourn him with undoubtable sincerity. Two little girls, honor students in the Mooresville school, his half-sisters, Frances and Doris, sniffle, for they loved him and to them he was their kind, playful big brother, John.

His father is too worried about how he will pay the funeral expenses and too tired from it all to give much of his feeble resources to grief. Aubrey has a flock of youngsters to care for and is weary and cried out, and her husband is glad it's all over, for he has his job to do, driving a bakery wagon.

MARY LONGACRE, 23

CROWDS IN TINY MOORESVILLE TRYING TO SEE HOMETOWN BOY WHO CAME HOME DEAD

GET 'BABY FACE,' U.S. MEN TOLD

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Get George (Baby Face) Nelson, the new No. 1 public enemy!

This was the order federal operatives were under today and they concentrated all their powers in this new man-hunt now that John Dillinger's body lies buried in the Crown Hill Cemetery at Indianapolis, mute evidence that the government "always gets its man."

Nelson, also known as Lester M. Gillis, is a product of Chicago's West Side, where at a tender age he became notorious as a "tough guy." Although he was one of the latest recruits to the Dillinger gang he soon became known as the chief gunner of the crew. He is accused by the government of being the man who shot down Federal Agent W. Carter Baum when Dillinger mobsters blasted their way to freedom from the vicinity of the Little Bohemia (Wis.) resort last April.

Nut Nelson, called "Baby Face" because of his innocent appearance, will be captured dead or alive before many months have passed, federal officials predict.

Dillinger Woman Reported in Hiding

FARGO, N. D., July 26.—(AP.)—After talking with relatives in Chicago last night, a brother of Mrs. Roy Keele, companion of John Dillinger when he was shot in Chicago Sunday night, said he believes the girl is in hiding in Chicago.

The brother, Ercyl Hamilton, said Chicago police denied they are holding the girl. Hamilton believes the girl is in hiding in Chicago and afraid to communicate with the family in Fargo.

DILLINGER'S PAL LONG AT GRAVE

INDIANAPOLIS, July 26.—(AP.)—The police he dodged in life stood guard today at the grave of John Dillinger.

To prevent the morbidly curious from violating the resting place of the Indiana outlaw, a police sergeant and two patrolmen kept vigil over the mound of freshly disturbed soil.

The bandit's father, John Dillinger, Mooresville (Ind.) farmer who celebrates his 70th birthday tomorrow, stood long at the grave, then returned home.

He had sat coatless in the hundred-degree heat as the Rev. Charles M. Fillmore, retired minister of the Disciples of Christ Church, preached the funeral sermon at the Maywood home of John's sister, Mrs. Audrey Hancock.

The minister made no reference to the notorious gunman who lay in the casket, but said:

"I glory that this whole family has had faith in God—a God of mercy so necessary in these days of vindictiveness and hatred."

DILLINGER LOOT ELUDES POLICE

International News Service.

CHICAGO, July 26.—Federal operatives and police searched today for the hideout where John Dillinger was believed to have concealed his arsenal and the remaining loot, if any, from his many spectacular bank robberies.

Careful search of the second floor apartment of Mrs. Anna Sage, "the woman in red," who was with Dillinger Sunday night on his final jaunt to the theater, revealed nothing in the way of either treasure or guns.

The keys Dillinger carried fitted the Sage apartment, one opening the front door and the other a bedroom linen closet, the lock on which had been sprung, authorities said, since Dillinger was mowed down by police and federal agents' pistols.

It was evident, police said, that Dillinger had used the apartment of Mrs. Sage as a trysting place where he was wont to meet Polly Hamilton Keele, the missing divorcee, who was his last sweetheart. She, too, saw Dillinger shot to death as they were leaving the Biograph Theater together.

'WOMAN IN RED' KNOWN HERE

Chicago's "woman in red," Mrs. Anna Sage, who played a part in the Dillinger capture, is the estranged wife of a former Pittsburgher.

The husband, Alexander Sage, lived in Pittsburgh for five years, leaving here in 1926, according to a brother, Michael Sage, of 213 Highland avenue, Aliquippa. He said Mrs. Sage was a frequent visitor here, her last visit to his home being a year ago.

COURT SCOLDS STATE RUM AGENTS

Two investigators of the State Liquor Board were reprimanded in Criminal Court today by Judge M. A. Musmanno for tactics which he termed "reminiscent of the evil practices of the now discredited prohibition regime."

The men, Charles E. Green and Paul E. Leonard, appeared against Mrs. Harry Weilersbacher, proprietress of a restaurant licensed to sell liquor at 508 Island avenue, McKees Rocks.

Pleading guilty to a charge of selling liquor on Sunday, Mrs. Weilersbacher testified that the actual sales were made by her young daughter who had been induced to violate the law by the repeated persuasions of the investigators.

Discharging the defendant on the payment of costs, Judge Musmanno said:

"The girl refused to sell the officers whisky when they asked for it. Through flattery and blandishments that made it appear that there was little or no offense in doing what they desired, she finally succumbed and sold the liquor.

"We will absolutely not tolerate such a practice, and in any case where we are convinced that the officer through deception or inducement caused the defendant to sell against his or her will, we will be disposed to release the defendant."

RELIEF DISPUTE COMPROMISE SOUGHT

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, July 26.—Unless Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins reverses his stand, it seemed certain today that Pennsylvania must hold a fourth special session of the Legislature in as many years to raise relief funds.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot was still hopeful for some last-minute arrangement to stave off the crisis until January. Hopkins, however, will have to approve any such scheme and Aubrey Williams, FERA's second in command, told Democratic leaders that Pennsylvania was expected to agree to pay half the relief load by September.

The final showdown was indefinite. The impasse has simmered along since the state ran out of relief money in April. Hopkins' ultimatum that the federal government would not continue to finance relief entirely after August resulted in a decision of the Relief Board to suggest that $1,250,000 monthly from the state liquor stores until January was the limit of the state's participation.

Before Gov. Pinchot could send this information to Washington, however, Williams told Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic candidate for Senator, that Pennsylvania was expected to contribute 50 per cent. The $1,250,000 offer will be made nevertheless, it was expected, as one effort to reach a compromise settlement.

Relief expenditures for the last few months have been about $10,000,000 monthly, including nearly $4,000,000 for works relief and other supplemental aids sponsored by the federal government and heretofore financed by Washington. If previous matching agreements are to be the precedent for the new demand for dollar-for-dollar sharing, the state will require something more than $3,000,000 a month. The $1,250,000 from the liquor stores will thus become inadequate unless Hopkins elects to accept the smaller amount as a compromise to avoid a special session.

Opposition to another special session has come not only from political camps but also from business organizations. Legislators and party leaders also oppose a session prior to the November election.

Attorney General William A. Schnader, Republican candidate for Governor, brought the relief situation openly into the fall political campaign with his speech at a rally in Philadelphia yesterday. He demanded that Pennsylvanians "unanimously rise up in protest" against Guffey's "implied approval" of a special session after his conference with Williams.

MOTHERHOOD FOR GIRL, 12, OPPOSED

DENVER, July 26.—(AP.)—A 12-year-old expectant mother was in Denver General Hospital today, while the superintendent of the institution, officials of the Juvenile Court and the City Attorney were in a controversy as to whether a birth-control operation should be performed to save her life.

Dr. B. B. Jaffa, superintendent of the hospital, declared the City Attorney's opinion was insufficient authority to permit the operation, and he appealed to the Juvenile Court for permission.

Replied Mrs. Merle H. Pilcher, referee of the court in charge of girls:

"The law is plain regarding the right of physicians, after consultation, to operate to force birth to save the life and health of the mother."

The girl's mother asked the operation after doctors said the birth would cost her life.

ONE GAS AS GOOD AS ANOTHER? ...NOT BY A LONG SHOT!

"I use any brand of gasoline, they're all alike," some people say. But—there's a big difference in gasolines. And to prove it, Gulf submits the results of 15 power tests in which 33 gasolines were tested. Read these facts about gasolines—then do your own choosing!

DOES IT PAY to be picky about the brand of gasoline you put in your tank? It certainly does!

For there's a big difference in gasolines—even though there may be no difference in what they cost per gallon. Gulf has proved that! How? By actual, show-down power tests on famous American hills.

On 15 tough mountain grades, tests were made of various gasolines. In all, 33 gasolines were tested—including every well-known brand sold in each area where a test was made.

Each gasoline was given the same job—a certain load to pull. The object being to see which could take a car and heavy load farthest up hill in "high" before the motor stalled.

THE RESULTS of these tests are shown on the chart below—All results certified by a Notary Public. Look at that chart. And look for the "sign of the orange disc" the next time you need gasoline. You'll find—That Good Gulf packs more power!

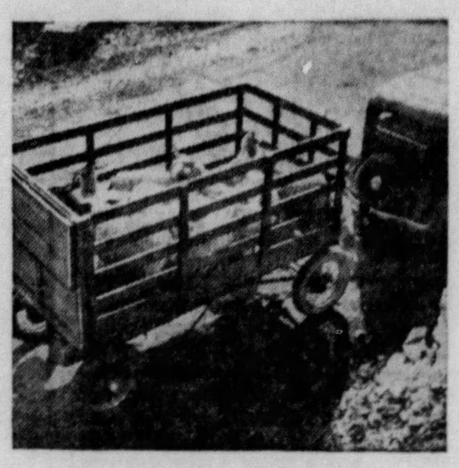
SCENE OF ONE BATTLE—Bear Mountain, New York, where 9 famous gasolines battled to see which could pull a 2,480-lb. load farthest up the grade. The winner?—That Good Gulf!

(Below) PREPARING TO TAKE OFF—Each gas tested was placed in a jar, which fed direct to carburetor. This made possible quick changes of gasoline for each test run.

(Below) LOOKOUT MT., TENN.—13 different gasolines battled here to see which could take this Chevrolet and load farthest up the hill in "high." Gulf walked off with first honors!



HOW 33 GASOLINES RANKED (IN ALL TESTS TO DATE)

All gasolines tested, except a few "third grade" brands, sold for approximately the same price as That Good Gulf. Each brand is denoted by a letter.

DISCOVER PLAYS BY LAWRENCE IN GERMANY

International News Service.

LONDON, July 26.—Unknown to the world, D. H. Lawrence, famous English novelist whose books frequently have been attacked by moralists in Europe and America wrote three plays.

They were only discovered by accident in a house in Heidelberg, Germany, in an attic, two years after his death, and have never been published.

Of one of them the first six pages were missing, while another was unfinished and existed only as a rough draft.

Leon M. Lion, English actor-manager, announces he has now obtained the unfinished play and proposes to produce it this season with the noted actress Sybil Thorndike and her husband, Lewis Casson, in the leading roles.

FOUND BY WIDOW

Lawrence called the play "The Daughter-in-Law," and this title will be retained.

Lion said the discovery of the three plays was made by Mrs. Frieda Lawrence, the novelist's widow, who found the manuscripts while rummaging through an old box in the attic of the house where they were staying in Heidelberg.

One of the plays was a light comedy, named "Fight for Barbara," apparently written at the time Lawrence first met his wife. The second, a tale of colliery days, was called "Married Man." Lion said:

"Neither Mrs. Lawrence nor her sister knew that Lawrence had written the plays. When he died, two years previously, the executors had collected together what they thought to be all his unpublished manuscripts.

"'The Daughter-in-Law' is a work of genius—far superior to the other two, and typical Lawrence.

"But it had to be finished. I consulted Aldoux Huxley and we decided to ask Richard Hughes to complete the revision. Mrs. Lawrence agreed, and Hughes has finished the rough draft. Lawrence, I think, would be pleased."

Gertrude, Doug, Jr., To Pair in New Play

LONDON, July 26.—(INS.)—Clemence Dane, noted woman playwright, has completed a new play for Gertrude Lawrence and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., it became known today.

A modern comedy, it is as yet untitled. The principals are again playing the parts of husband and wife. Rehearsals will start next month.

Chickens Too Tiny, Thieves Return Them

LANSING, Kan., July 26.—(AP.)—Thieves visited the chicken house of Mrs. Paul Carahan and took 50 young chickens.

Finding that they weighed only about a pound each and were too small to be marketed, the thieves returned the chickens the next night—apparently for further feeding.

Not that we like to boast, but we're singularly proud of today's prize-winning recipes, because they're tasty and still have that "done-in-a-twinkling" air.

Without a doubt you'll find something in the list below that's absolutely new to you. And it's new because it is one of those individual recipes that form a part of every housewife's culinary activities.

Probably you have one. If you do, why not try for one of the 11 prizes—one $5 award, five $1 and five honorable mention cook books—offered daily by this column? Address Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. No entries are returned.

BEES DROWNING IN OWN HONEY

LIMA, O., July 26.—(AP.)—Victims of record heat, thousands of bees have drowned in their own honey at the apiaries of Lester Shadley, near here.

Shadley says 20 colonies were wiped out in that fashion this week. The combs broke under the melting rays of the sun and the bees were smothered when wax and honey dripped on to them in the bottom of the hives.

Shadley has 150 colonies on his farm.

So angry are the bees at the turn of events, Shadley said, that he and his father, W. A. Shadley, who helps him, are unable to go among them. They usually produce about three tons of honey each year, but the output this year is in doubt.

THREE SEEKING TIGHE'S JOB AS STEEL BOSS

Members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers today were studying the full list of candidates for a primary referendum election, September 5. At this election the militant youth, as represented by the "rank and file element," will pit its strength against the old line officialdom, headed for the last 15 years by President Michael F. Tighe, of Pittsburgh.

With Tighe running for the presidency will be George J. Williams, of Canonsburg; B. F. Bennett, of Granite City, Ill., and Earl J. Forbeck, of McKeesport, considered one of the most powerful figures among the "rank and file" men.

There are more than 200 locals, each of which will vote separately. Their secret ballots will constitute a referendum primary in which two candidates will be named for each office except that of secretary-treasurer. After the primary results are certified to the national headquarters of the union in Pittsburgh, the general election will be held.

COAST WANTS TORTURE THUG

Nick Derembeis, held for court with John Arendish for gouging out the eyes of George Stratigos, Oakland bowling alley proprietor, and robbery, is wanted by police in Portland, Ore., and Sacramento, Cal., according to word received today by detectives.

Police of Portland and Sacramento informed Pittsburgh detectives that Derembeis, recognized by police photos, is wanted in both cities for burglary. He is known to them as Dick Derby, alias Richard Derby.

The two were held for court after the blinded Stratigos identified them by their voices as the men who robbed and blinded him.

OMAHA CARMEN STRIKE AGAIN

OMAHA, July 26.—(AP.)—Almost 400 union employes of the Omaha and Council Bluffs Street Railway Company walked out on strike today and for the second time in four months the city's workers walked or thumbed rides with motorists.

The union's executive board called the strike after a vote of the membership two weeks ago. Last April the men struck but returned to work, agreeing to arbitration. They were out four days.

The board of arbitration, reporting two weeks ago, recommended raises of three cents an hour for them and bus operators and denied other raises. The decision was unsatisfactory to union men.

Union officials said today's strike was called because of "continued discrimination" of company officials against union men, denying wages were involved.

COUNCIL BODY VOTES O. K. TO TOLL PLAZA

The public works committee of City Council today approved an ordinance giving the city's consent to plans for the toll plaza to be erected at the south end of Liberty Tunnels in the Allegheny County Authority's public works program.

As approved by the public works committee, the ordinance does not set up any specific design for the plaza, which will have to be worked out later in conjunction with the county.

The city, represented by Frederick L. Bigger, chairman of the city planning committee, suggests a plan, to cost $800,00 more, that would remove street car tracks from the streets at the south end of the tunnels and provide an overhead ramp.

If the plan should require the relocation of any streets, it was pointed out that an act of 1895 would interfere, since this act requires a two-thirds vote of Council and the signature of the Mayor on any ordinance for relocating streets.

Mayor McNair already has indicated he would veto any such ordinance.

Cornelius M. Scully, city solicitor, said approval of City Council for the ultimate design of the plaza is necessary under the consent ordinance approved today.

PWA SPEEDING COUNTY PLAN

WASHINGTON, July 26.—Legal advisers of the Public Works Administration today expect to complete the final draft of the trust indenture for the Allegheny County Authority which will be held by the Colonial Trust Company of Pittsburgh, trustee.

Attorney Ralph Frank, local counsel for the authority, and Attorney Robert E. Lee, of the New York law firm of Hawkins, Delafield and Longfellow, bond counsel, are putting the finishing touches on the indenture.

PWA officials said they hoped to have all the papers back in the hands of the Allegheny County Authority on Saturday.

10 MAIN ROADS TO BE OILED

Oiling of 10 stretches of main highways will begin Monday, according to an announcement by the touring bureau of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, warning motorists that the roads will not be in condition for ordinary passage of traffic.

S. No. 22 from Strodes Mills to the Pines, U. S. No. 20 from North East to the New York state line and No. 68, south of Piggon, Forest County.

National Model Plane Meet Postponed Month

By J. JAMES MOORE
Pittsburgh Wing Commander.

With fair weather ahead we are ready to take off on our late summer activities.

Before we head into the wind for our take-off there is one important announcement that you will be interested in—the National Junior Birdmen All-America Model-Plane Championship Contest.

The greatest miniature air race ever proposed has been postponed until Tuesday, August 28, just one month later than originally planned.

Although our local Model Plane Derby Champion Joe Isuro, already has been notified of this change, I thought you members would be interested too, for it means more time for our model builder to build new models for this great contest.

It will give him a chance to bring home that $2500 William Randolph Hearst National Trophy which each of the other sixteen Wing cities are going to try and win away from us—if they think they have the chance.

With weather conditions that will be alike for each of the Junior Birdmen Wing Champs, and flying from the same terrain, our winner assures us that he can compete with any Wing Champ in the country. We believe him and pin our faith in his ability to build and fly planes that will bring the First National Junior Birdmen Model Plane Championship to our city and Wing!

While full preparations are completed for this important national meet, which is to be held at famous Fort Meyer Field, just across the Potomac from the nation's Capitol, this postponement will enable us to make even a more complete set-up.

However it already includes a committee of judges selected from the most important aviation executives of the Government air bureaus, a banquet for the entire group of Wing City Champions and special tours of the city, government buildings and historic points of interest.

The local Wing Champions will all arrive in Washington Sunday evening August 26 spend Monday as the guests of the city, participate in the contest activities on Tuesday and leave for their respective home cities on Wednesday.

Our champ, we hope, will bring back with him the national championship and the coveted William Randolph Hearst Trophy as well as his choice of a trip to Europe or an aviation scholarship such as outlined in the official book of rules.

THE HOUSE of SEAGRAM presents

CROWN WHISKIES

A Royal Addition to their Line, Famous since 1857

The Greatest Whiskey Value in America

In presenting their line of Crown Whiskies to the American public, the House of Seagram chose to wait. They avoided the hurried months that followed Repeal. Actually it was over four years ago that the youngest stocks in Crown Whiskies were laid down to age.

It takes time to make whiskey the Seagram way. Because Seagram has learned in its 77 years of distilling experience, that "time works wonders."

Therefore, today you can buy Seagram's Crown Whiskies and drink them with full confidence. They are truly worthy of the Seagram name. They live up to the high standards the Seagram label has stood for through three generations. Their warming bouquet, their smoothness, and their full flavor will bring forth many delighted compliments whenever you serve them.

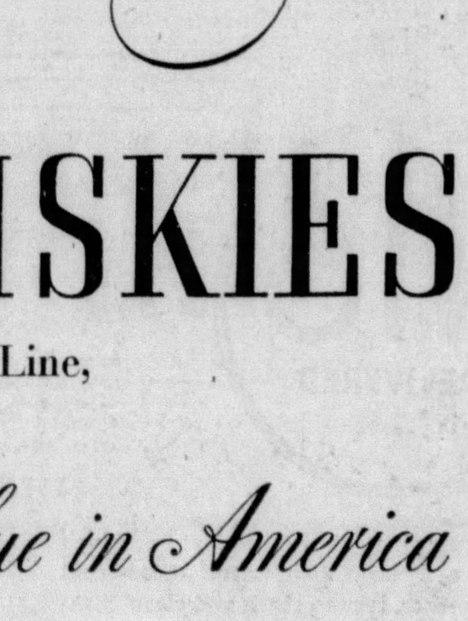
Knowing that the House of Seagram holds the world's largest treasure of fully aged Rye and Bourbon whiskies distilled in the best American tradition, you have positive assurance that only the costliest stocks have been selected for Seagram's Crown line.

Knowing this, you might expect a high price.

But Seagram's Crown Whiskies, we are glad to announce, are most reasonably priced. So reasonably priced that we can fairly say this—and mean every word of it: These Crown Whiskies represent the very greatest whiskey value on the American market!

In the months to come, undoubtedly you will hear much of these royal additions to the Seagram line.

To the American public, accustomed to paying high prices for fine whiskies, Seagram's 5 Crown and 7 Crown at their modest prices will be a complete revelation. . . May we suggest that you be among the very first to discover the blandness, and the mellowness of Seagram's Crown Whiskies.



Say Seagram's and be sure

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

I have had so many letters asking about the various pensions to be or that are being administered under the state law that I have asked Margaret Miller, the executive secretary of the Mothers' Assistance Fund, to be with me on the radio next Monday so that she can discuss with you just what has been done and just what will be done in the extending of relief to the blind, the aged, and the widowed mother.

To my own knowledge the Old Age Pensions will not be paid until December of this year. The law doesn't provide for payments before that date.

The forms for applications have not as yet been made up but the Mothers' Assistance Fund is taking the names of those needy persons over 70 years of age and who have been residents of the commonwealth for the past 15 years.

The payments to the blind have not as yet gone forth to Allegheny County residents from Harrisburg, however there have been 521 names certified to the state.

These are the names of those entitled to receive money and they may expect to get their first checks next month some time.

The widows have been receiving state aid for the past 20 years, under the Mothers' Assistance Fund.

Widows with children under 16 years of age are entitled to aid from the state.

The offices of the Mothers' Assistance Fund, which is also administering the blind and old age pensions, is in the New County Office Building.

I hope that the foregoing statement answers all the specific questions asked in the letters that have been received by the Globe Trotter. If not will you write me?

Roosevelts Broadcast Today

By AIRCASTER

Stunt broadcasts by and about the nation's First Family are heard from opposite sides of the world this morning and afternoon.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, the President's mother, speaks from Paris over the Columbia-WJAS network at 9:15 a. m.

The President, speaking from Honolulu, is heard over KDKA and WJAS at 2:45 this afternoon.

* * *

Some radio editors, continually squawking about studio audiences (and who cares) will cite this yarn as an example of why spectators should be banned from broadcasting stations.

The other evening Hortick's Gypsies went on the air. All that afternoon, Ed Dunhamn had caused a troupe of office stevedores to haul musical instruments around while the sound engineers experimented with the orchestra set-up.

This is a strict matter of phonetics, and a great deal of the program's success depends on how the instruments are placed.

Among the instruments which had to be placed within an exact distance from the mike was a celeste, which resembles a miniature piano.

When the broadcast went on and the time drew near for a soloist to play the celeste, a visitor suddenly got out of his chair and hauled the instrument across the floor to a spot at the other side of the room—far away from the microphone.

After being invited out of the studio, the visitor explained he moved the instrument because it obstructed his view.

Local Highlights on WJAS Tonight

Parachute Jumper On Air Tonight

Capt. E. E. Garrison, who has made 2,500 jumps from airplanes and balloons, describes a few of his thrills over WCAE tonight at 6:35.

An all-request program is sung by Howard Price, WCAE tenor, at 6:45 p. m.

'5-10' HEIRESS SUES BARON

DETROIT, July 26.—(AP.)—A suppressed suit for divorce by the Baroness Wijk, the former Catherine Kresge, heiress to the 5 and 10-cent store millions, against Baron Carl Carlson Wijk, whom she married in London in 1931, today was on file in the county clerk's office here.

Baroness Wijk, on whom her father, Sebastian S. Kresge, settled $5,000,000 at the time of his divorce, is at the summer home of her mother, Mrs. Anne E. Kresge, at Pemaquid Point, Me.

Baron Wijk, who was born in Sweden 20 years ago, but became a naturalized British subject in London, is the son of Lady Barnes, of Stoke Canon, Devonshire, England. Following their marriage they spent a brief honeymoon in France and then came to Detroit to live.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

Complaint

Oh, you could never doubt my faithfulness,
Or question at my frame of mind or heart.
But time is hard to bear, I must confess,
With only memory for counterpart.
Oh, it was not so easy to endure
A love that wandered far beyond my hand,
And yet, on each returning could be sure
I would be waiting, quick to understand.

My little words that should have reached your ear
Were lost, bewildered, on the air instead,
Because, for distance, you could never hear . . .
And I am young—and small words must be said.
They cry for life—while you but dig a grave,

The Hellinger You Say!

One of the colyuming craft was in a melancholy mood, again. In the newspaper building's barber shop. He was saying how weary he was of the grind—the hot streets of New York and the monotony of doing a column.

"I'll give it up," he groaned, "that's what I'll do!"

"If you give up writing a column," remarked James Cannon, "what'll you do to make a living?"

"Don't you worry about me," said the very sad man. "I'll do anything. I'll be a sailor or something."

LaGuardia's Like That

The other day the Mayor of New York was asked what he thought of a voter, who knew him for years—but who was using the Mayor's name carelessly to promote himself.

"He's harmless, I guess," was the reply in part, "but he talks a lot—the way all of us actors do."

As If You Didn't Know

Blank Cartridge

"Anyone knows that kiddies should be used to nakedness by now. Incidentally, the worst offenders in this respect have not been Hollywood impresarios but Broadway figures like Jack White and Earl Carroll."

The Morning Mail

"Chicago: Dear Winchell," reports one whose name is better left out of it, "the following incident may be interesting as illuminative of the fear which your name inspires in wrongdoers. The story, briefly, was this: A chap in Chicago was in love with a lady. He lost his job, and for a period of over a year she loaned him money on which to live. She had a job and earned enough to support both. In all she lent him more than $2,000. He finally got a job, but wearied of the girl, and though she lost her job and became ill, he refused to pay her a penny of his debt for many months. The girl told me the story and asked for counsel. I told her to do nothing and I'd collect it for her.

"The next day I met the chap (intentionally by accident) in a speakeasy, and told him that I had been tipped that Winchell had an article ready concerning him about some girl to whom he owed money. He paid every cent in 60 days. And I gained increased admiration for you as champion of the unfortunate, and stuck a feather in my own cap as a good bill collector.

"I thought you'd get a kick out of knowing that a lot of stuff is always going on back stage in which you unknowingly participate."

You Don't Say!

Arthur Boran argues that in the summertime doctors recommend olive oil as being very healthful, but what about the sardine?

Gag

Charlie Hughes, the DAC man, forwards another about one of those Hollywood managers who makes paragraphs like these. This executive had just come from a projection room where he viewed a new movie. He was distinctly disappointed.

"It don't move me," he began, "it's got no emotion in it!"

They asked him to make himself explicit — to amplify his opinion.

To which he shrugged his good shoulder and said:

"It just don't get me! It don't make my heart go Peter Pan!"

Add Wordage

In Other Words

A Baltimore subscriber says he likes the "Thumbnail Descriptions" but he thinks some descriptions of many of those mentioned should be named: "Hangnail Descriptions."

Drama Plan Meeting Tonight

Fifty Pittsburghers interested in dramatic art will gather in the Adonis room of the Hotel William Penn this evening to discuss the possibilities of a community theater on a large scale, inviting the cooperation of the half a hundred groups now active in smaller circles or local districts.

Mr. Seibel

It is an idea that has been in the air for several years. Now looks like a good time for it to come down out of the air and upon the solid ground.

In the past, Pittsburgh and other towns of the road have looked to Broadway for their theatric fare. Then the picture companies came along and snapped up good dramatic things before they had a chance to get upon the road. And Broadway also began to spice its offerings with so much sophistication and sex that they were largely wasted upon us amateur sinners.

Pittsburgh has enough promising playwrights and enough acting talent to start a little Broadway of its own. What Dublin, Moscow, Pasadena, Cleveland and other villages have done, may be done in Pittsburgh.

The meeting tonight will be watched with interest to see whether rival groups and conflicting ambitions can be induced to co-operate in one big community effort to give all a chance and let the city have the best.

The signers to the call for this meeting were Mrs. Madeleine Skelly Foust, M. E. Fierst, Mrs. Evan Jones, Richard S. Rauh, George M. Rowland, George Seibel, William M. Woodside and Charles L. Wooldridge, Jr.

Hollywood's Night Life Extremely Tame

By JIMMY STARR

HOLLYWOOD, July 25.—Hello! Carpet slippers and the fireside have replaced the flowing bowl and jazz band of Hollywood's "scarlet" heyday.

Still attracted by the publicity of years ago which heralded the movie village as a second Babylon, visitors from the East and Middle-West are flocking to the film capital this summer only to find that its night life is made up by themselves and other cinema sightseers.

The stars themselves are home early, studying lines for the next day's shooting, or preparing to go to bed in order to be fresh for an early start on the set in the morning. Even if they do not happen to be working, they try to spend as much leasure as they can with their families, for the majority of them are married.

Cecil B. DeMille—married to the same woman for 32 years.

Bing Crosby—the father of twins.

Norma Shearer—a fine wife and mother.

Jack Oakie—still mama's boy.

Shirley Temple—whose cinema life—so far—has not been marred by any engagement announcements. (Watch the press agents of Jackie Cooper and other youngsters hop on this idea.)

Polly Moran — whose "wild" scamperings have disappeared with marriage and playing mother to an orphaned lad.

Citizens laugh at the idea that Hollywood is a "Paris by night—only worse," and may erect a statue—if someone can get an idea—to the scarlet yesterdays . . .

* * *

Odds and Ends—and Some Beginnings—The Bill Powell and Jean Harlow hot stuff is still frying, despite what a lot of people will tell you . . . Otto Kruger played the wedding march on the piano at the ceremony for Claudia Morgan's "I do's" to Robert Shipee.

* * *

"Come back to the studio. The production cost is staggering."

Milestone radioed back:

"Yeah—and so is most of the cast staggering!"

Screen Has Dillinger

The end of the trail for John Dillinger, notorious bandit, is dramatically pictured in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, with the Globe Trotter describing all of the incidents. Edgar Allemand, garage mechanic, in a dramatic talk, describes the shooting of which he happened to be an eye-witness. There also are highlights of Dillinger's notorious career.

The battle for the governorship of North Dakota is brought to the screen with pictures of former Gov. William Langer, ousted by the court, who speaks from the steps of the Capitol in Bismarck.

Thrillingly rescued from an ice floe in the frozen north by Soviet airmen, Prof. Schmidt, famous scientist, and his group of explorers reach Moscow and are accorded a remarkable reception.

Appalling scenes of the bus crash at Ossining, N. Y., in which 17 died and many were injured, show the machine which plunged off the road into a lumber yard, still burning.

Mrs. Stephen Petros, wife of a restaurant worker in Hoboken, N. J., with her husband and five children celebrate her winning $25,000 on a Canadian sweepstakes lottery.

Dirt track auto demons stage a thrilling race at Hohokus, N. J. There are many skids and one crash through the fence.

Note—Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange programs in time schedules it is possible some subjects of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

Haines Gets Some Notes He Just Snubs

By LLOYD PANTAGES

HOLLYWOOD, July 26.—Fan adoration, coupled with fan mail, is acceptable to the stars, but with reservations, such as when they are, in the form of crank letters or goofy requests. In the case of William Haines there are two women who have been writing to him for the past three or four years, who might just as well stop their weekly epistles since they are not even opened by Bill any more.

Just in case you would be fascinated to know what a few of the famous do to banish insomnia Kay Francis plays solitaire, Edward G. Robinson turns on the phonograph with a few well selected classical numbers, Joe E. Brown counts camels instead of sheep, on account of they are more interesting, and, anyway, he was once in a circus. Mary Astor attempts a philosophical treatise which is guaranteed to throw you into the arms of Morpheus. James Cagney is open to suggestions. He once took a hot bath but it kept him awake for nights. Joan Blondell takes a walk, or a cold shower, or both. Frank McHugh reads a law case. The only time Glenda Farrell is bothered with the absence of the sand-man is when some fiend turns the lights off in her boudoir. She cannot sleep in the dark.

Sleuthing notes: Seeing as how the Fox studio has been receiving vast quantities of mail with the inquiries, "Is Elsie Ferguson dead, in this country, or where is she?" the writers will be charmed to know that Miss Ferguson, never more beautiful, has been in daily huddles with Producer Jesse Lasky and I wouldn't be surprised to see the little woman stage her comeback in his new opera, "The White Parade."

If you see a little daschund apparently lost, sing the first few bars of "Eadie Was a Lady" and if the puppy jumps into your arms, take it quickly to Gordon Westcott, who will reward you handsomely. Mr. Westcott, who had just finished a day's task in "The Case of the Howling Dog," listening to a police dog howl, which is supposed to be unlucky, arrived home to find that Eadie, his pet, had flew the coop. The song is said poochie's favorite ear-tickler, as well as monicker.

Behrman Finishes Film Script

S. N. Behrman, American playwright, has just turned over the completed script of "The Scarlet Pimpernel," on which he collaborated with Lajos Biro, to London Films. This adaptation of the novel by the Baroness Orczy will shortly be put into production at the Elstree studios with Leslie Howard and Merle Oberon in the leading roles. Leslie Howard is already in England preparatory to the filming of the picture in which he will have the stellar role of Sir Percy Blakeney.

De Mille to Film 'Crusades'

History's greatest struggle, in which all the nations of Europe banded together for an inspired and unselfish cause, will be the subject of Cecil B. De Mille's next picture, "The Crusades."

Harold Lamb, who wrote such books as "The Crusades," "Flame of Islam," "Iron Men and Saints," "Ghengis Khan" and "Tammerlane," has been signed to write the script on the picture which is to go into production late this summer.

This conflict, in which great and low, young and old, gladly gave their lives for an ideal, brought chivalry to its height and shaped by supreme effort and sacrifice the beginnings of the modern world.

The spectacle proportions and amount of research and preparation required by this forthcoming production has caused De Mille to abandon all plans for the vacation which he had scheduled following the completion of his last spectacle, "Cleopatra."

Casting for "The Crusades" will begin shortly, with Richard, the Lion Hearted, as the choice role to be filled. However, the four kings of Europe, including Richard, who fought the Crusades, and the Great Sultan Saladin who opposed them, will provide important spots for five leading men in the picture beside involving four leading women in the roles of the royal princesses of Europe.

Stars Plan DX Fight

International News Service.

HOLLYWOOD, July 26. — As soon as a pair of super short-wave radio sets arrive in Hollywood, Bing Crosby and Dick Arlen are to stage a station-finding battle that will last a week, loser to write out a check for $1,000.

The two stars, both enthusiastic dial twirlers, have ordered identical sets from McMurdo Silver, Chicago radio expert, who designed the equipment taken to the Anarctic by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd.

The sets are due to arrive August 5. With special double antennae raised above their Toluca Lake homes, Arlen and Crosby then will begin combing the ether for Russia, Germany, Japan, Australia and all countries sending out radio broadcasts.

Twenty-four-hour vigil will be maintained, the stars giving as much of their time as possible and to be relieved by men hired especially for the job.

At the end of the week the crew having logged the most stations will receive the prize money.

'Silver Cord' Feud Renewed

A dramatic feud that started in "The Silver Cord" is renewed in RKO Pictures' current film, "The Age of Innocence." Irene Dunne and Laura Hope Crews are the friendly warring artists. In "The Silver Cord," Miss Dunne played a young wife and Miss Crews portrayed the selfish mother of her husband who almost succeeded in wrecking the marriage. In the current picturization of Edith Wharton's famous novel, Miss Crews is again seen as a self-centered mother who does her artful best to prevent Miss Dunne from achieving romantic happiness. In the new picture, it is her daughter's interests she fights for. Julie Haydon portrays the daughter and John Boles is the man of the triangle.

'Human Side' Kept As Film Title

After three months of searching for a new title for Christine Ames' play, "The Human Side," Universal has decided that the jazier titles which had been suggested would be out of step with the times. It has decided to use "The Human Side" for this production starring Adolphe Menjou with Doris Kenyon, Charlotte Henry, Dickie Moore, Reginald Owen, Joseph Cawthorn, George Earnest, Betty Lawford, Dick Winslow, Jack Mulhall and Bill Dooley.

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

Odds and Ends.

BACK FROM Hollywood comes the talented Monte Brice with a new motion picture story that amused me mightily. Seems that a small independent company around out a feature that they didn't want mentioned until it was actually ready for release.

Came time for the preview, and the president of the outfit discussed the matter with several of his co-workers.

"We gotta have a sneak preview," he said. "We don't want a soul in the business to be around except ourselves. This has really got to be a sneak preview. Where do you fellows suggest we take the film?"

One chap suggested San Diego; another was in favor of a spot to the north. The president couldn't see either place, and they finally agreed on a little town that was at least 20 miles south of nowhere. Two nights later, they all sat in the small theater in the town in question and watched the picture being unreeled.

When it was over, the crowd filed slowly from the theater. The president was receiving the customary congratulations when, to his amazement, he saw the head of a rival independent outfit emerging from the same spot.

He rushed over to him.

"Why, Harry," he cried, "what are you doing here?"

"Came to see the picture," replied the other man.

"But this was supposed to be a sneak preview," said the first producer. "How did you find out about it?"

The second man shrugged.

"Hard to keep those things quiet," he announced. "I heard about it—and here I am."

The first producer forced a grin.

"Well," he said, "as long as you attended our sneak preview, what did you think of the picture?"

His rival rubbed his chin.

"Well," he returned calmly, "as long as you ask me, I think you ought to have a sneak release!"

"DEAR Mark:" writes Eddie Garr. "I see by today's column that Bob Larner, L. LB., wrote you and said he read about my lawyer friend who was boasting that business was good because he had a $10 case—aand two small ones. I also noticed that Mr. Larner was anxious to get this lawyer's address as he wanted to apply for the position of managing attorney.

"Well, Mark, you can tell Mr. Larner that, so far as my friend is concerned, he can have the position. But before he can give Mr. Larner a definite answer, he will have to take it up with his three partners!"

* * *

IT'S a tough world, sigh Cross and Dunn. And if you ask them why, they'll point out the sad case of the Hollywood actress who now finds conditions so tough that she has to make last year's husbands do for another year!

* * *

THE years may come and the years may go, but the "CLOSING OUT—MUST SACRIFICE EVERYTHING" racket seems to go on forever.

Only the other afternoon, I passed one of these stores on Broadway. Lurid signs all over the place gave out the news that all goods must be sold at a loss at once. This was a fire sale, a bankruptcy sale, a lease cancellation sale. Everything had to be sold immediately.

And even as the suckers rushed in and out, a van backed up with a new storeload of goods that "had to be sold at a loss!"

* * *

UP at the Paradise the other evening, reports M. J. Mooskian, a windy ham was talking and talking and talking. The talk got around to automobile accidents, and the ham had one for that subject, too. It was only two Sundays before, he related, that his car had crashed with another.

"And would you boys believe it," he said, "during the accident my mind was a total blank."

A listener yawned.

"We can all understand that," he said. "But what was your alibi before the accident?"

* * *

THE story is true, and you can take Jimmy Gillen's word for it. Bill and Jack, two racketeers, were standing in front of one of Broadway's better restaurants.

They were chatting affably and, oddly enough, the conversation didn't concern larceny in any form. The two gentlemen were speaking of self-made men, if you please, and of successful people in general.

"There you are," he said. "That guy is livin' proof of what I was just talkin' about. He's a real self-made success. Why, 10 years ago he was down on the East Side clippin' drunks. That's what he was doin', clippin' drunks. And look at him now."

"I'm lookin'," said Jack. "What's so wonderful about him?"

Bill's eyes opened wide.

"What's so wonderful?" he repeated. "Why, without help from nobody, he's the most prosperous burglar in the city!"

* * *

"I WISH to protest against the killing of Dillinger," wires Joey Nash. "With conditions as bad as they are, why should 20,000 gag writers be kicked out of jobs?"

Nina Kochetz, international opera star, who shared program honors with Rachmaninoff on his concert tours, has been added to the cast of Samuel Goldwyn's "We Live Again," starring Anna Sten and Fredric March. She will appear before the cameras with Khmara, noted exponent of gypsy music. A special score for the film has been arranged by Alfred Newman, musical director for Goldwyn. It will form the background for an officers' dinner presided over by March. "We Live Again" is the screen transcription of Tolstoy's "Resurrection," to be released through United Artists.

STOCK FOR PITTSBURGH?

Advance rumblings of a theatrical season to come are being heard. An undercover agent advises me that a producing company fashioned along the lines of Wee and Leventhal will begin stock operation here late in October or early November.

According to my informant, a theater has already been secured, and the repertoire plays to be offered will be rotated in one and two-night stands throughout Western Pennsylvania. The bills will be staged here for the customary week, after which the troupe will go "on tour," later to return to Pittsburgh for another play.

An established Pittsburgh showman has been asked to handle the proposition, but he has neither declined nor accepted the post. New York money is behind the project, and late plays with "guest" stars some weeks in included in the plan.

INTIMATE SILHOUETTE OF THE BUXOM WEST

If 11,000,000 movie fans saw Mae West's first picture, "She Done Him Wrong," and 35,000,000 rushed to box offices to put down money for her second, "I'm No Angel," how many will see her third. "The Belle of the Nineties," or does that make the free-wheeling star the screen's gift to a jaded world?

At any rate, here's a boudoir closeup of Mae that may or may not pass the censor boards: She never takes showers, preferring a tub perfumed with rose salts. . . . She has more than a dozen fluffy negligees and wears a different one every morning for breakfast. . . . This is served in her boudoir while she reclines on a pink satin chaise lounge. . . . She has 27 bottles of perfume on her dressing table, but uses sweet pea almost exclusively. . . . Her hair is shampooed weekly and a hairdresser comes every morning to give her a finger wave. . . . She gets three manicures a week and uses vivid red polish. . . . She prefers chiffon dinner gowns to pastel shades. . . . She likes massages several times a week and cannot resist buying the laciest and sheerest lingerie. . . . Her nighties are all lavishly trimmed with lace. . . . But, there isn't a pair of pajamas in her house!

THE TATTLE TALE

Pittsburgh's dancing Sunny O'Dea, who used to be Martha Bonini, a big hit in London at the moment, is being courted in the British metropolis by the Indian Prince of Baroda. . . . While Pittsburgh's Elmer Kenyon postcards from the same city that sherry parties have supplanted the cocktail hour in the customs of the Britishers. . . . That old silent heart-thumper, J. Wearren Kerrigan, is leading the life of a retired gentleman in Hollywood. . . . Hal Roseon is going to London for something either than recover his health and forget Jean Harlow. . . . She's to be the new cameraman on "The Scarlet Pimpernel." . . . Pittsburgh friends of Tom Meighan will be glad to know that he will choose his Great Neck home late in August and return to Hollywood with a definite screen comeback in mind. . . . Irene Cowan is working in the Civic Playhouse's "Oliver Oliver" while ill, and several other members of the organization have been "down with the heat" at rehearsals. . . . Pittsburgh's Gracie Barrie, the personality lass, who used to take to well with Dick Powell at the Stanley, is being hailed by New York scribes for her dulcet intonations in the new summer revue in New York's Casino de Paree.

KEEP IN TOUCH

FOR your peace of mind while away on vacation see to it that the folks back home know how to reach you by telephone. So much can happen during your absence that you will not want to be completely out of reach.

If there isn't a telephone in your cottage or camp, there's a public telephone nearby. As soon as you arrive, telephone home and give the home folks its number. Arrange to be notified if they should call you.

Then you are carefree! If you're needed at the office—if someone is taken ill—the message can reach you without delay. Nothing adds more to holiday happiness than to know that everything is "under control" at home.

THERE ARE TWO KINDS OF OUT-OF-TOWN TELEPHONE CALLS

A STATION TO STATION call is a call by number—just like a local call—when you do not ask for a specific person. Use this low-cost Station to Station service when you are reasonably sure the person you want is in immediate reach.

Give the local operator the number and hold the line. For example: say "I want Atlantic City, Marine 1234."

Reduced Evening Rates apply on Station to Station calls after 7:00 P. M. STANDARD TIME. Still lower Night Rates apply after 8:30 P. M. STANDARD TIME.

A PERSON TO PERSON call is where you ask the operator for a specific person, hotel room or extension telephone. It costs more than a Station to Station call and offers no Evening or Night reductions.

Give the name and telephone number (or address) to the Long Distance Operator. For example: say "I want John Jones, Atlantic City, Marine 1234."

RAILWAYS DODGED PAYING CITY, UNION CHARGES

NEW YORK Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 26.—Radio is in the most desperate search of its career for sustaining talent. Familiarities of broadcasting breed the usual contempt. And no form of entertainment ends in such quick oblivion. Ten of the most popular features on the air came to a full stop this year.

The demand is always incessant for something new and original. It has become for the artist, as mercurial as public favor, a calling with practically no future. This adjustment was totally unexpected. For, a year or so ago, the popularity of a program seemed indefinite.

Now, six months of continued acclaim is considered a long run. Because of the times or that the novelty has worn off, there has been a big slump in fan mail. The star who used to receive thousands of letters weekly now numbers them in the hundreds.

The biggest audiences are recruited for the single night broadcast built up by an extravagant ballyhoo. The foremost executives realize there has come a transition period. The radio is here to stay, of course, but a big change in presentation is around the corner.

Whatever the ultimate fate of the Casino in the park, it attained one record few high-class restaurants attained. Not one intoxicating drink was sold there during prohibition.

* * *

I was in the Casino a wintry night when a prominent fellow of the town came in thirsting for a highball after a trying evening. He implored Sidney Solomon to scare up the makings. Solomon chop-chopped: "No can do." But, in the emergency, he did point to an almost covered flask belonging to a couple dancing. The thirsty man purloined his drink and, before departing, sent the lady an anonymous bouquet.

* * *

The Casino, too, gave shy young Eddie Duchin his chance to be an orchestra leader. He was a young pianist with Leo Reisman, studying pharmacy at Columbia and paying his way tickling the ivories

at night. He was so engaging at improvising while the orchestra was at lunch that young ladies came especially to hear. As a result, he was given a chance to organize his own orchestra and became a sensation of the restaurant and on the air.

Gilbert White has gone back to his chateau in France, after three months in New York, likely unaware of the affection of his host of admirers, old and new. The painter, brother of Stewart Edward White, is one of the sharpest differentiators between the sham and genuine. He had a blustering contempt that would soften into humorous depreciation for stupidity. No one clung more to the old things or is so resentful of the new unless proved time-worthy. He could be warm toward a stranger or icily cold, for he summed up character at a glance. And was about 100 per cent right.

There are queer shoots of loneliness in this suffocating city. I have a philosophic bachelor friend, 40 of whose 60 years have been spent bending over dull and endless figures as an accountant. He lives in a shabby rooming house and several pay cuts have not enlarged his outlook for content. A great reader, he gets his books at a public library but, because he likes to read late, goes to the men's waiting room of a railroad terminal, where he often reads until 2 a. m. As a subterfuge, he carries his books in a little grip to give the apperance of being a traveler.

A suit not worn for a year was hauled out of the mothballs today. It was all out of line. So much so that I went to my wife for explanation. "Maybe," she said, "you have begun to sag."

Heat? Try Senator Coyne's Recipe for Keeping Yourself Comfortable

WHOA! THE AIM'S A LITTLE OFF, SENATOR! Senator James J. Coyne in his own brewery at Millvale just sort of drawing himself a stein of beer.

THAT'S BETTER—RIGHT INTO THE GLASS! And so into the glass it goes, foaming and even overflowing onto the floor if you're not very skillful.

THERE IT GOES! IN CAMERA'S EYE The third step, a very simple one. You can see that the Senator's interested.

MRS. M'KIBBIN DIES IN OHIO

Mrs. Nancy Patterson McKibbin, 83, a former resident of Pittsburgh, died yesterday at her home in Cincinnati. She was the widow of the Rev. Dr. William McKibbin, former pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church here.

Mrs. McKibbin was born in Washington, D. C., and was a member of the first graduating class of the Pennsylvania College for Women.

Mrs. McKibbin was a member of a prominent Pittsburgh family. Her great-grandfather, Col. John Canon, founded Canonsburg and also Jefferson College, now Washington and Jefferson College. He also was the local business agent for George Washington, a position he lost through participation in the famous Whisky Rebellion.

Another of Mrs. McKibbin's great-grandfathers, Dr. Absalom Baird, served in the French and Indian Wars. His home, one of the first mansions built west of the Alleghenies, is a Washington County showplace. Dr. Baird played host to Gen. LaFayette when the French aristocrat visited this district.

Joseph N. Patterson, Jr., father of Mrs. McKibbin, was the son of the founder of the Patterson Publishing Company, of Pittsburgh, with which firm one Joseph Smith gave up his job to go west and found Mormonism.

Two of Mrs. McKibbin's brothers, now dead, were well known lawyers in Pittsburgh. They were Robert and T. H. B. Patterson.

She leaves three daughters, Mary and Harriet, of Cincinnati, and Mrs. Nancy Irwin, of Chicago, and one grandson

Volunteers Plan Philadelphia Home

A new women's home will be erected in Philadelphia, according to an announcement made at the general state conference of officers of the Volunteers of America of Pennsylvania. The meeting was opened by Col. Earl Hites, of Indianapolis, at Volunteer headquarters here yesterday. The announcement was made following a conference between Col. Frank H. Wise, Capt. Dora Reagen and Charles Brandon Booth.

AIRPORT RATE HEARING NEAR

A reply of County Commissioners to the request of the aeronautics committee of the Chamber of Commerce for a meeting to discuss the dispute between the Commissioners and air transport companies using the County Airport was to be handed the committee today. The Chamber committee had asked that the meeting be attended by members of that body, the Commissioners and representatives of the various air lines.

The Commissioners were understood to have advised the committee that they would be willing to grant the request, setting August 15 as the date, when regular sessions of the Commissioners will be resumed.

In their letter to the Commissioners, the Chamber body stressed the fact that they were neutral in the controversy. Harmar D. Denny, Jr., vice chairman of the committee, said that the only aim of the Chamber is to obtain the best air service possible for Pittsburgh.

County Director of Parks A. M. Marion conferred yesterday with L. P. Arnold, assistant to the president of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., and Maj. Hal Bazley, manager of the County Airport, and discussed the rates charged ships landing at the port, to which air lines have objected on the ground that they are too high. At the close of the meeting it was announced that Maj. Bazley will make a survey of 30 landing fields in various cities.

COUNCIL VOTE HITS NUDISM

Nudism will make no inroads into Pittsburgh this summer if the city fathers have anything to say about it.

Council went on record today as being opposed to the fashion, rapidly spreading among the city's youth, of wearing shorts, and nothing much else, in public.

A resolution, presented by Robert Garland, president of Council, was adopted at this afternoon's session, indorsing the Department of Public Works and the Department of Public Safety for their campaign against shorts wearers.

Arguing that athletes clad in shorts are not considered indecent, Attorneys Harold Lavine and Samuel Schifano appeared before Council yesterday to protest the arrest of a group of young men thus attired, who were seized in Schenley Oval by Police Inspector Harry E. Moore.

Heat Wave Turns Oklahoma Into Kitchen Stove

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Oklahoma bobbed up yesterday with a temperature of 117 degrees. That means the Union consists of 47 states and a kitchen stove.

But that ain't nothing to the old days when the West really ran a fever. The old-time cowboy wore woolen shirts and drank himself hotter than the weather.

Beef cooked on the hoof. If a rancher wanted his eggs boiled less than two minutes he had to shoot the hen the instant it started cackling.

The only way you could tell a prairie fire from ordinary weather was by wiping your face with a rough towel. If the freckles came off it meant local conditions were normal.

Vices of Wife's Ex-Mate Blamed

Saying his wife saw in him all the vices and foibles of her previous husbands, Joseph Caputo, well-known musician, has filed an answer to the divorce suit of his wife, Rose Caputo. Difficulties with other spouses, he charges, have made Mrs. Caputo hostile and irritable.

The musician, who lives at 36 Mayflower street, denied he married for money, asserting his wife misinterpreted his well-meant endearments. Failing to reciprocate his intentions, he said, his wife threw his clothes out of their bedroom, forcing him to sleep on a couch.

BORO OFFICIAL FINDS HE'S ALIEN

Councilman James Lindsay Wotherspoon, of Whitaker Borough, filed an application for American citizenship at the Pittsburgh office of the naturalization service.

Until recently he believed himself to be a citizen through the naturalization of his father, but an investigation showed that he was four months over 21 years when his parent was naturalized. Had he been under 21 years he would have automatically become a citizen.

For more than 30 years he has voted and enjoyed all privileges of a citizen of the United States. In such cases where an applicant for citizenship has had good reasons for believing himself to be a full fledged citizen, naturalization can be obtained in 90 days, if nothing is found to disqualify him.

Councilman Wotherspoon was born in Cambridge, Scotland, May 21, 1880, and came to this country September 15, 1888.

GIRL, MAN HURT IN AUTO UPSET

A 17-year-old girl and her male companion were dragged from under an automobile when it overturned in Arlington avenue, at Fernleaf street, last night.

Taken to South Side Hospital, the victims, R. F. Schaffer, 22, of 2310 Spring street, and Catherine Hackel, 17, of 325 Bassler street, Mt. Oliver, were suffering from possible skull fractures. The accident was said to have been caused by faulty steering apparatus.

TAX REDUCTION URGED HERE

Taxpayers of the Third Ward, Homestead, will hold a mass meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at 1120 Sylvan avenue. Attorney Max U. Applebaum, of the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners and Taxpayers League, will speak.

Reduced taxation of homes and other real estate would be one of the most constructive steps possible in the movement to return prosperity, declared I. Leonard Aronson, president of the league, in an address yesterday at the annual retail grocers' picnic. Aronson said the entire state is being organized with the aim of having school taxes taken off real estate. The commonwealth would appropriate the funds for school purposes.

QUIET NEIGHBOR MOURNED

Neighbors of Jacob Ruppen, 68, of 60 Gregory street, today mourned his death as that of the quiet benefactor to many families in the neighborhood.

His death was discovered because of the habits which were familiar to neighbors. Mrs. Katherine Jackson last night noticed a back door open. It was after the hour it should be closed. She entered the house where Ruppen lived alone and found him dead. Death was apparently due to a heart attack. Deputy Coroner Roy T. Addlesberger found $920 in Ruppen's pockets. The dead man had helped many neighbors during the depression.

Past Officers to Honor V. F. W. Head

Reservations have been made for nearly 600 veterans and members of their women's auxiliaries. Mrs. Norma Potts, state president of the V. F. W. Auxiliary, will attend. Judge George V. Moore is toastmaster.

FUND REPORTED DUE UNDER OLD PACT

Wage Parley Adjourns To Await Company's Case Next Week

A 13-year-old agreement between the city and the Pittsburgh Railways Company, by the terms of which the traction concern dodged payment of $300,000 annually for three years, according to contentions of the trolley men's union, had been submitted to a special arbitration board today.

The agreement, executed in 1921, was submitted as one of the final exhibits by the union before closing its case before the board yesterday afternoon. The board, composed of Dr. J. W. Madden, impartial chairman; Councilman John J. Kane, for the union, and Philip A. Fleger, for the company, is conducting the hearings to set a new wage contract for the men.

RECESS UNTIL TUESDAY

To permit company officials to complete preparation of their case, a recess was taken until next Tuesday morning.

The old agreement with the city provided, O. David Zimring, union counsel, told the board, for two payments.

In lieu of bridge tolls, taxes and similar items, a blanket payment of $150,000.

'IN THE RED'

The agreement provided that when the company showed "in the red" for a year these payments would be relaxed. Zimring has contended that "overcharges to depreciation and reorganization" gave the company a loss for three years, making possible the dodging of these items.

Under similar agreements with other municipalities, the company had agreed to pay $100,000, which were also relaxed because of the deficit during 1931-1933, the company admitted.

Before closing his case, Zimring called three motormen who had been "furloughed" by the company and forced onto public relief rolls, and declared he could produce a total of 35 such cases.

COUNCIL DOWNS MORITZ 6 TO 1

An ironic touch was added today by City Council to the Theodore L. Moritz-Charles A. Finley Traction Conference Board fight.

Council dealt what looked like the last punch in the scrap, although Judge Samuel H. Gardner ruled yesterday that the position was not a public office and that the consent of Council must be gained to remove Finley.

Councilman William A. Magee, however, framed a resolution covering approval of the appointment of Moritz—a man of many jobs.

A vote was then taken. The results were six to one against Moritz with Councilman Walter Demmler casting the only vote in his favor.

Tarentum Meeting Closes Sunday

The eighty-fifth annual gathering of the Pittsburgh and Tarentum Camp Meeting Association will close Sunday at the organization's camp grounds, near Tarentum.

The final sermon will be given by the Rev. Dr. Thomas H. Gallagher, pastor of the Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, North Side. Other speakers Sunday include the Rev. Dr. W. S. Trosh, and the Rev. Dr. L. D. Spaugy. The Natrona Men's Chorus and the Natrona Boys' Quartet will sing.

Confer On Changes In Lumber Code

L. L. MacQueen, secretary of National Code Authority for the builders' supply industry, was in Washington today to discuss with Norman Foster, deputy administrator of the industry, amendments to the code which have been submitted by advisory boards. MacQueen will speak at a convention of Virginia lumbermen at Virginia Beach tomorrow.

THOUSANDS OF LOTTERY TICKETS SEIZED IN RAID

Waiving a hearing, Edward J. McMackin, 41, seized by police in a raid on an alleged lottery ticket printing headquarters at 348 Forty-second street, was held for court today when arraigned before Magistrate J. W. McGowan, in Central Police Court.

As evidence against McMackin, city detectives offered three lottery tickets taken from among thousands confiscated along with a printing press, stitching machines and other equipment in a raid last night.

One of the tickets used as evidence was a Grand National Sweepstakes ticket on the Arlington classic, to be run at Arlington Park, Chicago, on Saturday.

Two other tickets were in the Quebec Unit No. 33 of the Army and Navy Veterans' sweepstakes and on the Memorial Hospital Trust Fund sweepstakes at Quebec.

The police staged the raid following a tip that several persons had held winning tickets in some of the "pools," but had not been paid their prizes.

They seized a printing press which they said was used for printing the lottery tickets here, thousands of the tickets, two stitching machines and numerous baseball pool books.

Council Clips $300,000 From Public Works

Council today had clipped approximately $300,000 from the Public Works Department's program of improvements, but, after swinging the ax in finance committee, had given its approval to more than $1,100,000 worth of work.

One of the largest appropriations rejected for the time being was the $100,000 proposed for improvements at the Highland Park zoo.

Sympathetic over the plight of the zoo animals, some of which are declared to be threatened with rickets and other maladies owing to poor quarters, the City Fathers nevertheless balked at spending such a round figure as $100,000 on them at this time.

Clipped also was $94,000 from the parks and playground improvements fund and $63,000 from a fund proposed for the erection of more and better concrete steps.

The finance committee approved these items: $421,974 for waterworks improvements; $48,000 for bridge repairs, $45,500 for street improvements and walls, $265,000 for street repavings, $37,000 for concrete steps, $53,000 for parks and playgrounds, $33,500 for state-federal aid street improvements, and $210,000 for reconstruction of the Four-Mile Run sewer.

East End Christian Church was the scene of a pretty summer wedding this morning—that of Eloise Campbell, daughter of the Charles Talbot Campbells, of Bartlett street and Dr. Thomas Edward McMurray, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Edward McMurray, of Ferree street.

The ceremony took place at 11:30 o'clock with the Rev. John Ray Ewers officiating. Urns of summer flowers in yellow and white, cibotium ferns and candelabra decorated the dhurch.

A graceful gown of white lace over the white satin was worn by the bride. It was fashioned with long, tight-fitting sleeves, cut into a point over the hand. And it had a quaint Queen Anne collar of lace.

Bride Wore Juliet Cap

Instead of a veil and cap, she wore a Juliet cap of maline having a halo-like brim of white velvet. She carried a bridal bouquet.

Her only attendant was her sister, Imojeanne Campbell, whose gown was like that of the bride, except in color — Imojeanne's gown was cornflower yellow. She carried yellow garden flowers.

Stuart E. McMurray was his brother's best man. Dr. Howard Holt Bradshaw, of Boston; Dr. E. Colvin Hassenplugh, of Milton, Pa.; Thomas L. Campbell, a brother of the bride and Samuel H. Johnson, Jr., were ushers.

The bride's mother was in turquoise blue crepe with brown accessories and had a corsage of sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother chose a blue and white chiffon gown with harmonizing hat and a corsage of gardenias.

Breakfast in Country Club

A wedding breakfast at the Pittsburgh Country Club for the families and bridal party followed. Later they drove to Madison Golf Lakelands, where the bridegroom's parents gave a reception at their summer place there.

The bride and bridegroom will go later to Mackinac Island for their honeymoon.

The bride attended the Mary Lyon School, Swarthmore and is a graduate of the Carnegie Tech Drama School. Her fiance attended Arnold Sdhool and is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh Medical School.

Butler Man Bridegroom In Rome

He is Dr. Eugene Isabella, son of Michael Isabella, of Butler. The bride was Miss Marianne Berardgli, daughter of Giulio Berardgli, of Rome, consul general of the court of appeals, director general of the institute for prevention of crimes and minister of pardons and justice for Italy.

The bridegroom, although born in this country, finished his education in Rome. He is a graduate of the University of Rome and studied surgery at several hospitals there.

After the ceremony Dr. Isabella planned to take his bride to Paris, to visit Venice and to return to Rome before sailing late in November for the United States. They expect to make their home in Butler.

Honeymooning DeBors In Atlantic City

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert A. DeBor are honeymooning in Atlantic City and New York and will be at home in Mt. Oliver when they return. Mrs. DeBor, before her marriage to the son of Mrs. Catherine DeBor, on July 18, was Miss Mary Fromm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Fromm, of Otilla street.

The ceremony took place in St. Joseph's Church, Mt. Oliver, at 9:30 o'clock that morning at a nuptial high mass with the Rev. N. J. Nemmer officiating, assisted by the Rev. M. Hinnebush, the Rev. August A. Vogt, of West View, and the Rev. Wendelin Meis. John Edward Larkin, a student at St. Vincent's College, was master of ceremony.

The bride wore a princess gown of white satin made with a high, cowl neckline, long sleeves with epaulets over the shoulders and a full court train. Her lace veil was finished with a cap embroidered with seed pearls and caught with clusters of orange blossoms. She carried gardenias.

Miss Mildred Fromm, as her sister's maid of honor, wore a frock of blue net made with a cape collar and pale pink organdie flowers. Her picture hat was made of the blue net and she carried mixed garden flowers. Miss Victoria Fromm, another sister, was bridesmaid and wore yellow net with a large matching net hat and carried yellow roses. The bridegroom's niece, Lois DeBor, as flower girl, wore a Kate Greenaway frock of ruffled pale pink taffeta and carried a muff of taffeta trimmed with flowers.

The wedding breakfast was served in the Fromm home with covers for 30 guests. There was a reception for about 100 guests in the evening.

'Y' Conducting Special Sport Classes

The Health Education Department of Central Branch, Y. W. C. A., offers special attractions during the summer months. Classes in swimming, tennis, and golf are given under expert instruction. They are graded according to beginning, intermediate, and advanced lessons. Central Branch swimming pool is unique in Pittsburgh because it is used exclusively by women. Its chlorine sterilization system, sanitary looker rooms, and yearly medical examination, required of every swimmer, insure absolute protection. The pool is available during the day for dips. Some business girls use it during their noon hours for refreshing and invigorating exercise.

Through the Spyglass VIEWING THE NEW

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

* * *

Look up ahead of you and see the shadowy reflection of fall's new things that are beginning to cast outlines before them. Ponder them well . . . then take a little time out to let your thoughts "jell," if you want to really make the most of yourself when autumn DOES arrive.

Silly as it seems, now IS the time when all wise women will come to the aid of their wrapping-up problems of next winter (even though you may be glassy-eyed with the heat at present). And after having spent some hours burrowing through racks of fur coats like a veritable beaver . . . we come to the conclusion, that heat or no heat, this business of coat-coat . . . who's-got-the-coat, is an interesting one.

There being . . . such swellish new features to fill your eye! There being . . . such swank of line and cut . . . of lining and collar . . . of wily souls who have thought up ways and means to get something-out-of-nothing to present you with a fur coat that you'd never dare hope to have at a price that is still reach-able for shy and retiring budgets!

See . . . for example . . . the stunning coats of mink gills or flanks! These are made of REAL one of the "untouchables" when it comes to average purse—and are priced at $295. The point of the matter coming merely to this . . . that when the best mink coats are made, there are bits of the neck and upper legs left over, the gills and the flanks. Which, now, the wiseacres take and stitch together into a chevron stripe, which in turn is sewed into the long stripes of the real mink manner. They wear well . . . they're smart . . . few people know about them or have them so you would be sure of a distinctive coat . . . and you have REAL fur, not also-rans!

* * *

The new corded crepe effect used as linings in most of them. Unless we miss our guess most mightily . . . we'd say that they'll wear remarkably well.

The "slimming" effect of the new sleeves. Coats are very straight and plain . . . with high, built-up collars.

Sports coats use rabbit or muskrat with colorful plaid linings and matching scarfs. Ideal for the college girl and rah-ing 'round the football fields (if you can bear the thoughts of it right now!)

* * *

As for cloth coats . . . look for the "bark" and Jumbo crepe fabrics. Even as before, they're rough and heavily furred. Which shouldn't grate on you as much as usual either, now that the fur tax has been removed, and you can have fine qualities and lots of them for really sane sums! Blacks, of course, black always has and always will be THE smartest color of all. But keep an eye on greens, for "they" say that green is slated for a lot of popularity this fall. Long straight silhouettes . . . slim svelte lines. You'll be surprised at what can be had for as little as $39.50. We've seen it already!

SPEAK UP, SISTERS :-: Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance :-: By MARION BRUNOT

'No Time' Weak Excuse Of Note-Shirker

Hasn't any TIME to WRITE to her.

That is the complaint of a sister who signs herself SHE. This fellow isn't a girl's man, anyway, but when he went away on a new job he asked her to send him letters.

And she has done so, and there hasn't been an answer. And she wonders if he is so occupied with his business that he can't find any time to pen epistles.

The question is, sister, is any man ever TOO BUSY not to do that which he desires?

I wonder...

Miss Brunot

There is the type of man in this country who puts his work ahead of everything else. It becomes a god to him, and he is as pleased with himself as the swine that shoves out other swine at the common trough.

He neglects the woman he says he loves, and thinks he has the best of reason.

But does he really know what love is? Or is he too material to recognize anything so abstract.

Such human beings are so anxious to gain what the Bible calls MAMMON, that they make ROBOTS out of themselves. And in time, they have no more emotion than a robot.

This boy friend may be such a man in the making. Or again he may intend to write, and merely put it off. Then, too, he may have read, Do RIGHT and fear no man. Don't WRITE and fear no woman.

Personally, your letter is so carefully written and placed so artistically upon the page, I would think he would want you to send him many such communications, and that an answer certainly would be small payment.

MARRIED MAN

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl of 18 and have been going with a man I like very much. I hear he is married and has two children. Would you go to him about it, or would you listen to your informants and give him up?

UNDECIDED.

I would certainly go to the man with the complaint. If he admits the truth of what you have heard, tell him you cannot see him any more...No man has any right going about and not telling that he is married...

TIRED OF DECEPTIONS

Dear Miss Brunot:

I have read your column, and I find that in many cases I would give the same answers you do. Yet even though I can find solutions for others, I have none for myself. At the age of 15, I was an unkissed girl. At this time I went out with a fellow whom I almost hated.

I went because my girl friend wanted to go with a certain boy, and she could not go alone. In time, his winning ways won me. Although we are often together it is always away from home, as I am not allowed company. Once my mother found out, and I had to stop. But after a time I saw him again.

During our long courtship we quarreled twice. Each time, there were five or six months lapsed and we did not see each other. The reason always was that someone had told me he was unfaithful. What troubles me, he never mentions the future. When he and I are together now, all he does is make love.

I am quite popular, especially at dances. Lately a fellow of my own nationality and age has been paying attention to me. He has been at our home, and my parents like him. Of course I told him of my steady fellow, and he was nice about it. He has not mentioned love since, although I know he cares. I am tired of deceiving my parents. What shall I do?

UNCERTAIN.

Give up the first fellow who never mentions the FUTURE, and accept the attentions of the one you have met recently and who speaks of love, and whom your parents like. One seldom marries the first love.

FIRST BOY FRIEND

Dear Miss Brunot:

I am a girl of 16 and see a boy friend practically every night. He being the first fellow who has ever come to the house, I have had to put up with a good deal of interference from my parents, who are old-fashioned. The other night mother and I went for a walk, and we had the luck of seeing this fellow sitting on another girl's porch.

This changed mother's opinion of him. She is against him now.

Miss Brunot, I have written to you as the only person in whom I can confide. Please help me soon.

THE DUCHESS.

If your boy friend visits regularly, he soon can show your mother he is sincere. It scarcely can be expected, he will never even sit on another girl's porch. Old-fashioned parents sometimes are a trial, but they always have your real interest at heart, Duchess. Don't you think you are too young to be really serious, anyway. I am glad you feel such confidence in me. And write again, sister.

SUCCESS RUINS MARRIAGES UNHURT BY POVERTY, SAYS FAY KING

By FAY KING

Although it is so often said that when poverty comes in the door love flies out of the window, it is really success and prosperity that so many marriages find hard to weather.

Loved ones will cling together in times of trouble and adversity, but they will drift apart when luxury and pleasure take up too much of their time.

There are two dangerous times in life for men: the desperation that poverty may drive them to and the dissipations that success may lead them into.

Hard knocks and brave struggle develop a back-bone, but the flattery and popularity that comes with success undermines.

DOWN TO THE SEA IN COTTON BATIK

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Shorts of loincloth draping and a brassiere make this entire cotton batik suit, unless you count the natural color cotton rope necklace.

Under the sarong (skirt to you) of this model there is the same old twisted shorts, but the brassiere is a bit more generous. Self material hitches it to the shorts. Colors are black coffee and yellow.

There is a little variety in the harnessing of the model sketched center, and vivid colors instead of the yellow, wine and navy of the suit shown left.

IT'S FASHIONABLE to be slightly goona goona in your sea suits just now, an old South Sea Isles custom, minus the grass skirt. Swathed but briefly in richly batiked cotton, intricate and necessary drapings held firmly in place by strong little snaps; a girl can know she is doing right by herself when she climbs aboard her surf board or sits down beneath a breadfruit tree to sip a rum sling. In the latter instance, however, it is considered cricket, or whatever the Maori of that might be, to snap on a sarong, or draped skirt, everone's shorts and bra, just for the deuce of the thing. The artist has poked an hibiscus blossom into these models' Ulrich coiffures, but they are no more necessary than the banana and sisal leaves also provided in the seascape.

Take the word of an old Maorian (one of the Four Hawaiians, to tell all)—you'll look swell in one of these outfits if you can bear yourself at all in one.

* * *

THERE ARE all sorts of trick bathing suits enlivening beach combing life these days. The rubber suit, no longer a novelty or a great extravagance, is pretty nippy looking. For the right figure, in all white, it is something to snapshot. No one sees as many taffeta models as she expected to see. "Baby pants" or tailored shorts plus a halter seem to be more popular. There are lots of acetate silk pinafore models around, the jersey lining added to them this year being a grand selling point. They are cool and they are becoming, but every woman who owns one should watch out that her attached acetate shorts don't get droopy and baggy on her. What price a pretty becoming suit that is embarrassingly out of kilter below the skirt line? 'Twere better far to stick to a classic knitted model than to go fancy in a ludicrous manner.

* * *

FOR WRAPS on the beach those coats made of old-fashioned ratine are very good. They don't weigh a third as much as Terry cloth, dry or wet, and they can be dried very quickly after wear over a wet suit. A wrap-around, full peasant skirt and a pea jacket of unbleached muslin makes a smart sun-repelling outfit over a suit, too.

Everyone is wearing dark glasses on the beach this year, perhaps out of pure swank, but they are an affectation which will help out many a complexion besides saving eyesight itself from strain. They are so terrible looking that they're smart—even with goona goona trappings—and it behooves a gal to lay in a pair or so for daily wear and ultivation.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Treacherous Waters

Dr. Copeland

The number of life guards stationed along the beach front of any large public beach, proves to the bystander that the authorities are well aware of the many dangers confronting bathers. These able men are prepared for any emergency and a well-manned staff of life guards will be found on duty at all times the beaches are open to the public.

The danger in swimming is not always due just to the treacherous water. The swimmer fails at times to realize his shortcomings and neglects to take necessary precautions. Poor swimmers often indulge in strenuous swimming, little realizing that in case of an emergency they would be unable to help themselves, because their strength had been expended in the first few strokes. Good swimmers may overtax themselves. They become fatigued or perhaps are seized with sudden cramps and so endanger their lives.

One should never go in swimming too soon after a hearty meal. Trained athletes allow at least one hour of rest after any meal before entering the water.

Swimming, like other exercises, should be indulged in moderately—never to excess. Many muscles are brought into use while swimming. It is one of the most strenuous forms of exercise. When indulged in moderately sufficient relaxation is obtained and great benefit results from this form of exercise.

During the summer months and particularly while you are away on your vacation, be sure that you swim where you are certain the water is safe. Determine its depth before attempting to dive and be sure you know your own strength before venturing far from shore. Swimming in polluted water is dangerous. Fortunately, the state and local boards of health keep the swimming places posted and you may feel perfectly safe in swimming in approved pools or other waters.

Persons who are overweight find swimming especially beneficial. Here, too, the importance of overexertion must not be disregarded. Half an hour a day in the water, in addition to attention to the diet, will go far in helping to take off excess fat.

Persons afflicted with high blood pressure, heart disease or other abnormal conditions, should avoid surf bathing. In some cases the physician may grant permission to bathe in a lake or in still water. But moderation should be the rule in all such cases. It is always best to consult your own physician if there is any doubt in your mind as to whether you should indulge in this sport.

Let me warn you never to overtax your strength while swimming. Avoid staying in the water too long. Be careful not to go too far out. If the life guard warns you against being caught in an undertow, heed his advice. He knows where you should swim and is assigned to protect you from harm.

Every child should be taught to swim at an early age. Children or adults who are unable to swim are handicapped.

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Lucky (?) Guess

When the Declarer on today's hand succeeded in fulfilling his contract, his opponents did practically everything but accuse him of cheating. Furthermore, the best that two spectators could say for South, even though they did not suspect his honesty, was that they thought he was indeed very lucky.

The hand was submitted to me. My verdict is that unquestionably the Declarer was guilty of nothing but playing good Bridge.

East, Dealer.

	♠ K 6 5 ♡ 6 ◇ K 5 4 ♣ A Q J 9 7 3
♠ 10 4 3 2 ♡ J 8 4 2 ◇ J 7 ♣ 6 5 2	North West East South	♠ A J 7 ♡ K Q 10 9 3 ◇ Q 10 8 3 ♣ K
	♠ Q 9 8 ♡ A 7 5 ◇ A 9 6 2 ♣ 10 8 4

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	2 ♣
Pass	2 NT	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

The above bidding was rather normal. South, the Declarer, had a certain amount of information to start off with as to the type of game his opponents played. East and West, he knew, were playing an ultra One Over One System, one in which two-bids were made only on enormous rock-crushers and accordingly the partner of the Opening bidder was expected to keep a one-bid open on little else but a prayer.

West's Opening lead was the deuce of hearts, and East, of course, played the Queen. South knew that the Opening lead was either a singleton, a fourth-best, or conceivably away from three to an honor. The last possibility, however, seemed unlikely, and South was also able to discount the possibility of the singleton Opening as, if West had held a singleton heart, East would naturally have had eight cards of the suit and would, of course, have rebid. South, accordingly, knew that there would be no point in staying off with his Ace on the first round of hearts.

Starting off with the premise that West held four hearts, South further reasoned that it would be practically impossible for West to have the club King, as, playing an ultra One Over One System—or for that matter any other system—a player with four cards of the suit his partner has bid and an outside King usually raises his partner's suit, or, at the very least, keeps the bidding open. South therefore decided that it would be useless to finesse the club Queen. Accordingly, he led a low club, and when West played low he went up with the Ace in Dummy; and lo and behold, the King dropped, together with snarls and snorts and moans and groans from East and West. Actually, when South made his play he did not really expect to drop the club King. He knew however, that the finesse could not win and therefore that he had nothing to lose by going up with the Ace.

It was just another case of a smart Declarer playing for every possibility, and in this instance South was rewarded by fulfilling his contract of three no-trump. Obviously, had the Declarer taken the club finesse and lost it, East would have run four heart tricks and set the contract.

I wonder if East and West still think South was cheating!

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

The elbow length sleeve is trying, yet it is appearing on daytime dresses and evening frocks. Not so bad on the plump arm, but fatal to the skinny one.

Frilly stuff around the wrists means that hands must be beautifully white and nails manicured carefully. Little mitts must look dainty. We offer this suggestion to careless, hurried gals who are long on nail polish and short on cuticle attention.

It rarely happens that the complexion is not improved by the free use of soap. Fancy the state of one's hands if they were washed in clear water, or renovated with cold cream! Soap is the world's champion dirt fighter, queen of all cosmetics.

When the cuticle flares up and reddens after the sudsy cleansing it is often because there has been too much friction, and capillaries are overstimulated. A bit of cream and the demonstration of rebellion is finished.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Small Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My daughter is to be married but she does not care for a big and formal wedding. Still she would like to be married in a church and have dinner for her friends and relatives after the ceremony. How should I go about planning this, and what kind of invitation should be sent out. Mrs. A. K. S.

Such a wedding as your daughter has in mind can be especially lovely, I think, with only relatives and a few friends gathered in church for the ceremony, and a happy dinner planned for after the ceremony. For this kind of informal wedding, all of the details would be informal . . . informal invitations, informal clothes, and an informal dinner.

Your invitation would be written something like this:

Dear Louise:

Mary and Tom are being married informally in the chapel of United Church on Saturday, the first of September, at five o'clock. We are inviting only the relatives and a few close friends, and are almost anxious to have you and Jack with us for the ceremony, and later, for an informal dinner at our home. You will both come . . . won't you?

Cordially yours,

If the dinner is to be given at a hotel, you would, of course, make all arrangements with the head waiter, several days before the wedding, with the menu planned.

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Edith Fairfax Taunts Madge About Hugh

As Hugh's cry for "Margaret! Where has she gone?" came out of the library, where he was stretched upon the hastily improvised operating table I moved swiftly away from the door and beckoned Lillian with me. I knew that the cry must have been heard by every one of the group gathered in the hall, and while I was naturally embarrassed at the knowledge, it would not have bothered me much save for the consciousness of two pairs of hostile eyes watching me with what I knew was avid interest in what Hugh was saying.

The avid, hostile eyes belonged to Edith Fairfax and Avis Arlen's mother, but Edith's were the more venomous. Mrs. Arlen's were speculative, as if, I told myself, she were wondering how best she could turn this particular bit of knowledge to account in order to help on her daughter's matrimonial pursuit of Hugh, which nearly all of us had recognized.

But Edith's! She might as well have cried out, "Aha! I have found you out!" And it was only by a mighty effort that I was able to repress a shiver which would have been perceptible to Edith, and over which I knew she would gloat.

WANTS TO LEAVE

"Will you do something for me, quickly?" I whispered to Lillian.

"Of course. Shoot!"

"Ask Dr. Braithwaite if he absolutely needs me to be with Hugh. If he doesn't, I want to get out of here at once."

"I get you." Lillian answered, as her eyes swept the group in the corridor. They lingered for an instant upon Edith's face, and a mocking smile curved her lips as her eyes met those of the woman whose hopeless adoration of Dicky had caused me so much uneasiness during the years of my marriage.

Edith's cheeks flamed, but her eyes did not lower before Lillian's gaze. Indeed, there was in them a mockery equal to Lillian's own and defiance as well.

"This is sure nuts for Ede." Lillian murmured, as she turned from me to go back into the library. "But we'll try to spike her little guns for her."

As always, her very air lifted some of the weight from my spirits, and it was with affectionate gratitude that I watched her cross to Dr. Braithwaite and speak to him.

He frowned at first and shook his head. Then, as she went on, his knitted eyebrows straightened out and he gave her a nod of acquiescence. But he said no word to quiet Hugh's repeated call for me, at least not while he was within sight and hearing of the people in the hall.

Lillian came back with real haste, but a carefully contrived appearance of leisureliness. As she came into the hall she shut the library door firmly behind her.

"What!" Edith Fairfax murmured mockingly, from between white lips curved in a bitter, malicious smile. "Isn't Dr. Braithwaite going to let dear Hugh have his Margaret to solace his suffering?"

JAUNTS EDE

"Still grousing, Ede?" Lillian asked carelessly, and with a grin that made her words disarming. "I thought we put the hobbles on you last night when you had the brainstorm over Dicky's going out into the cruel night to the hospital, without you to smooth his pillow. It was the dear boy, himself, though, that put the quietus on that. I wasn't a bit to blame, after all. It isn't my fault, nor yet Madge's, that these gallant gentlemen want her to smooth their pillows for them."

There was a distinct taunt in the words and Edith valiantly tossed it back.

"Far be it from me to minimize our Madge's attractions," she answered, "but—I don't see any pillow-smoothing going on in Hugh's case."

"That's because our Madge has an unusual sense of decorum," Lillian retorted. "She believes in confining her own attentions to her own husband. Dr. Braithwaite just assured me that Hugh wouldn't die if Madge didn't hold his hand during the fixing of his wound, so Madge is going to fry another panful of fish that she has on the range."

Stirring Tennis Victory Cup Chance Now Seen
Baseball Term Explained

Pitt's New Triple Star

When the outstanding sports performances of 1934 are reviewed at the end of the year, there will hardly be any worthy of a higher ranking, from the angle of rare fighting spirit and the accomplishing of the seemingly impossible, than the achievement of the United States Davis Cup tennis team in defeating Australia in the inter-zone final for the right to meet England in the challenge round. In the history of Davis Cup play, the net world has seen nothing that outshone the sensational comeback in which Sidney Wood and Frank Shields yesterday wrested the closing two singles matches from Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath to turn what had threatened to be a rout into an amazing victory.

Frank Shields

This country's chances appeared to have been hopelessly crushed when Australia took the first two tilts in singles. It meant that the Wood-Shields-Lott-Stoefen combination would have to sweep the doubles and the remaining two singles matches to escape defeat, and the task was generally viewed as next door to impossible. The glorious triumph of Uncle Sam's standard bearers under such discouraging circumstances speaks volumes for American fighting spirit as well as for the playing skill of the team, and after that great exhibition of courage and class the United States players must be viewed as having a far better chance of defeating England and winning the cup itself than has ever been conceded to them. The uphill victory against Australia ought to be a fine confidence builder on the American side and at the same time may put the English cup-holders under a spell of uneasiness that will not help their play.

ORIGIN OF "CHARLEY HORSE" REVEALED

All baseball followers, of course, know what a "charley horse" is, but few know how it got that way—how the term now commonly used to denote a kink in a player's leg came to be adopted. It remained for Walter McCredie, of the Portland club in the Pacific Coast League, to reveal the origin of the term. According to the Oregon veteran, "charley horse" originated at the Sioux City (Ia,) park in the old Western League in 1889.

To drag the diamond, the Sioux City club used an old broken-down white horse named Charley. So aged and infirm was the gentle plug that he could barely hobble along. It took him about half an hour to drag the diamond, putting one foot down very slowly and carefully before he lifted another. The horse's legs were so bad that when a player turned up with a limp, somebody would be sure to say "Here comes Charley." From that expression came "He has a charley in his leg," and eventually, "he has a charley horse."

PAUL WANER GAINS BY SCATTERING HITS

What brought about the big brace in the hitting of Paul Waner in recent weeks, a great drive that has made the Pirate right-fielder the top contender for the batting championship of the National League? Big Poison himself will tell you that it came from abandoning his early season habit of aiming for home runs over the starboard screen at Forbes Field. One of the greatest natural hitters in baseball, the elder Waner is at his best when scattering his blows, refraining from right-field pulling and punching the ball frequently into the left meadow. Against his own better judgment, Paul this season frequently yielded to the urging of some teammates and gave up that style to attempt driving home runs into the right-field stand.

Paul Waner

Waner's average went down as a result, but a few weeks ago he discarded the home-run idea. Instead of trying to pull the ball high and deep to right, he went back to his old method of meeting it squarely and punching it to left and center as well as to right, and you can read the answer in the fact that his figures have mounted to a point that puts him in the running for the league crown. He is hitting again in the same way that made him the circuit leader in 1927 with an average of .380. Some of the other Pirates, notably Gus Suhr and Earl Grace, might well take a leaf out of Waner's book. Their hitting has been hurt no little this year by too frequent aiming at the right-field stand. Suhr's batting value was greatest early in the campaign when he was hitting often to left field. That system, varied with occasional pulls to right, kept the opposition guessing and made it difficult to play in the right spot for him.

NEW PRO BRINGS UPLIFT AT SCHENLEY

Walter Phillips, the new golf pro at the Schenley Park course, is doing an excellent job. One observing golfer who played there first 10 years ago and quit in 1931 to transfer his activities to other courses, went back last week for a round or two and reports that he was amazed at the changes. In the first place, the course is in its best shape, though nature gets a bow for some of this. In the second place, the improvement in the caddies is remarkable. No longer is a ball lost at Schenley before it stops rolling. And the caddies are improved in all other respects, too.

In the third place, the general tenor of the place is much higher. Phillips is pretty much of a gentleman, and sees to it, too, that the golfers themselves toe the line. Because of all this, Phillips is having a fine year, probably better than that being enjoyed by most pros at private clubs. He is doing a capacity business on lessons, for one thing, and it is from this department that most of the side revenue comes.

PITT HAS THREE-GAME STAR IN MADDEN

A versatile young star who promises to be the first three-letter man in Pitt athletic history since Johny Luch will begin his varsity campaign in the fall. He is Bob Madden, one of the city's ranking tennis players, and son of Dr. Joseph Madden, of the Pitt Law School. As a Panther freshman, young Madden earned numerals in three sports—basketball, track and tennis. He did not play any basketball in high school, but went out for the frosh team at Pitt and got along well enough to play in most of the games, his natural agility serving instead of the usually required experience.

Bob Madden

In track, Coach Carl Olson pronounces Madden one of the most promising quarter-milers he has seen, but there is a question as to just how much time Bob will want to take from his favorite sport of tennis, a game which he can keep up for years after he graduates. He was the No. 1 man on the Pitt freshman squad and probably will step into the same position on the varsity, replacing Nate Ganger. Incidentally, Bob, like his older brother, Joe who won his letter in both tennis and swimming is also a crack swimmer.

N. KENSINGTON LEGION NINE ELIMINATED

The Western Pennsylvania American Legion junior baseball title, up until last evening apparently headed for New Kensington, rests today in Claridge. The Claridge youngsters, hitting timely behind the four-hit pitching of George Gerlosky, eliminated New Kensington's crack nine, 4 to 0, at Forbes Field last evening, winning the third and deciding game of the elimination series.

New Kensington had won the second game Tuesday evening at New Kensington, after losing the first on Sunday at Claridge.

Gerlosky, who beat New Kensington in the Sunday encounter, fanned eight batters last evening and also came through with three of his team's 13 safe hits and scored two runs. Playfair and Sokol hurled for New Kensington and were hit hard. The score:

YAROSZ BOUT SET BACK

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The date of the Vince Dundee-Ted Yarosz bout for the middleweight championship of the world has been set back one day to the night of September 11 to avoid conflict with the Jewish New Year observance, which would keep many of the Jewish fans away.

It was revealed today that the prime backer of the show is Ray Babcock, well-known local golfer and sportsman. He has three associates in guaranteeing the financial security of the venture. They have incorporated under the name of the Sportsmen's Enterprises, Inc., and have established headquarters at 237 Fourth avenue, where ticket headquarters will be set up. Other offices will be maintained in the William Penn Hotel.

The show will be operated under the license of the Hickey Park Boxing Club, with Bus Vogel, the Hickey Park promoter, as the matchmaker.

Vogel today denied that a definite scale of ticket prices had been agreed upon.

Between Rounds

Promoter Bus Vogel, of Hickey Park, is working on the preliminary card for his Tiger Randall-Joey Speigal and Mike Barto vs. Jimmy Vaughan double windup show for next Monday night. He has Jimmy Belmont and Jack Dalcherone in an eight-rounder and needs only two five-rounders to fill the bill.

Answer to query—Dates of the Leonard-Tendler fights were July 27, 1921, and July 23, 1923.

Ted Yarosz meets Bud Saltis, of Chicago, in the main bout of a benefit show in East Liverpool, O., under the auspices of the American Legion on August 9. Moss Butch boxes Ross Fields and Harry Weekly battles Patsy Severo in two eight-rounders.

Amateur boxing bouts again will be a feature of the County Fair in South Park, September 1.

U. S. Track Stars Add to Victories

STOCKHOLM, July 26.—(AP.)—Bill Bonthron and Ben Eastman, stars of the touring American track and field team, scored sensational victories yesterday in the second day of the international meet under Swedish auspices.

Eastman, former Stanford University ace, bettered the listed world record for 500 meters when he won the event in 1:02.8. The existing official mark is 1:03 made by E. Tavernari, of Italy, in 1929.

Bonthron conquered Erik Ny, of Sweden, who recently beat Italy's Luigi Becalli, in the 1,000 meters in 2:28.8, more than five seconds lower than the record.

Dean May Be Dizzy, But So Are Batters as He Takes His Place as Foremost Pitcher in Baseball

First Victory Scored Over Pirates in 1930, and He's Come a Long Way Since; Here With Cardinal Flag-Hunters Tomorrow.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

It was the last week of the 1930 season, and the Pirates were in St. Louis engaging the Cardinals in the final series of the race, a series destined to crown the Cards champs of the National League. This writer was at the ball orchard early and at the noon hour watched the veteran Joe Sugden as he worked out a flock of kids.

Presently the Redbird regulars filed onto the field for a batting session. Sugden had not warmed up a pitcher, and he had to work fast. Waving to a big, fine looking lad of 20, the coach shouted:

"Hurry and warm up, kid. They want somebody in there who can get something on the ball!"

The smiling giant grabbed the rocket and threw four or five pitches with the grace of a Cooper or Mathewson, the ball cracking into Sugden's glove like a pistol shot. Then he yelled:

"I'm ready; let's go!"

MAKES GREAT START

That was my first sight of a pitcher who in four short years rose to outrank all hurlers of the sport—Jerome (Dizzy) Dean. The Cardinals clinched the pennant that day or the following one, and, with only one game remaining on the schedule, Gabby Street assigned Jerome to face the Bucs with Larry French up. Dean held the Pirates to three hits and recorded his first major league victory.

Sergt. Street apparently figured Jerome too young to become a Card regular, so he sent him back to the Houston farm for the 1931 season. Dizzy won 26 games, hung up a phenomenal card of 303 strikeouts and returned to be a St. Louis starter in 1932. So Jerome was just past 21 when he made his first real bid for fame. The 1932 season was well under way when I asked Catcher Jimmy Wilson for an estimate on Dean. Quoth Jimmy:

"What do I think of Dizzy?" It may sound strange to you, but I think that kid is, or soon will be, the best pitcher in baseball. He has more deliveries than anybody I have seen and he has the grace of a fawn. When he's pitching the Cards have five infielders—nobody has been able to sacrifice on him yet, and at the plate he acts like a regular batter."

HAS EARLY ESCAPADE

It was just about this time that the bright lights dazzled Jerome for a short spell. To offset the careless habits, Street insisted that Jerome room with Pepper Martin, who is a 9 o'clock guy in anybody's town. One night Pepper went to bed and took Dizzy along, but after the Wild Horse of the Osage had passed into the arms of Morpheus, Dizzy arose, dressed and went out for a spree.

Wilson said he was eating breakfast when Jerome came sliding back to the hotel, his face being a dead giveaway on his condition. Yet, withal, he wore his accustomed smile. Dizzy leaned over the Wilson and whispered:

"I put one over on Pepper last night, Jim. I sneaked out after he went to sleep."

Dean's catcher retorted:

"That isn't so funny, Diz. Maybe you think you put one over on Pepper, but did you figure you may have outguessed yourself?"

FULL OF CONFIDENCE

Wilson eventually got Dean on the right track and he won regularly. They went into Chicago for a flag-bearing series. Dizzy walked over to the Cub bench and announced:

"Paul Derringer will pitch and trim you fellows today, and I'm going to shut you out tomorrow."

Dizzy was only half right on this boast. The Cubs beat Derringer, but Diz blanked them the next day. Last week Dean threw back the Braves in Boston and the next day he sent this note to Burt Whitman, sports editor of the Boston Herald:

"Dear Mr. Whitman—How come my picture isn't in your paper today?—Dizzy Dean."

Maybe Diz will stage another strike when he shows in Pittsburgh in the series opening tomorrow.

In his most recent start, last Monday, Dean beat the Giants, 6-5, for his tenth straight victory and his eighteenth of the season. He fanned eight of the champions to bring his season total of strikeouts up to 116 and halted Hal Schumacher's winning streak at nine straight.

By the way, Dizzy's bid brother, Paul, also is a pitcher with the Cardinals. He's good, too. If you don't think so, ask either one of them.

DEMPSEY MAY RUN GARDEN

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The old eviction scene, with Squire Jack Dempsey foreclosing the mortgage on the present officeholders at Madison Square Garden, was revived today, this time with the best chance yet that the script will be confirmed. In fact, they say it will be done within a week, possibly less, with Dempsey and Ancil Hoffman taking the concession on boxing there and James J. Johnston taking the fence.

Dempsey and Hoffman, according to the story, have already reached an agreement with the corporation whereby they will lease its outdoor and indoor arenas purely for the promotion of boxing. The arrangement is understood to be effective September 1 and will continue for one year, with an option of renewal.

A further detail, hitherto not mentioned, is that Don Shields, Sacramento (Cal.) boxing man, is to be brought in as matchmaker, replacing Sam McQuade. Shields not only led the fight to legalize 10-round boxing in California but is said to have had a hand in drafting the bill. More significant still is the fact that he and Hoffman are friends of long standing.

CORSAIRS MOVE TO IMPROVE SLAB STAFF

The first specific move looking toward the stepping up of the Pirates' inferior pitching staff was made today when President Bill Benswanger announced the purchase of Pitcher Clarence Struss of Little Rock, known as the speedball king of the Southern Association.

Struss, only 21, has fanned 111 batters in the 170 innings he has pitched so far in the Class A organization. Little Rock finished last in the first half of the Southern Association season, yet the youngster has been able to win almost half of his games; his record is 10 victories against 11 defeats.

The new phenom will not report to the Buccos before the race in the Southern circuit is decided but he is sure to be a part of the spring training squad of next year.

SCOUT O. K.'S ROOKIE

Almost six feet in height and weighing 170 pounds, Struss, a right-hander, started his professional career with the Rock Island club in 1931. He was pitching fine ball for Peoria of the Mississippi League last year when Benswanger took note of his work. The Pirate prexy followed the kid's pitching closely and then dispatched Scout Carleton Molesworth to look at the pitcher.

Molesworth gave the youngster his O. K., but indicated he was too young for major league duty. Benswanger then interested the Little Rock owners in Struss and the owners of that club purchased him from Peoria. Meantime, the Pittsburgh club worked out an agreement with Little Rock regarding preference on the purchase of favored players.

WORKS ONE-HIT GAME

Struss appears to be getting closer to stardom with the added experience. He pitched one-hit and three-hit games in his last two starts.

Pitching for Peoria last season Struss gave a remarkable strikeout exhibition. His card for the year showed 148 innings of pitching with 168 strikeouts, which sent his fanning feats for the year into double figures per game. However, he walked 105 batters, a tendency which will have to be corrected before he becomes a major league star. In the Southern Association this year he has shown a marked improvement in control.

Benswanger, touching on the Pirate situation in general, said the club would not recall Pitcher Cy Blanton, of Albany, or any of the other farmhands before consulting Manager Traynor, who will be in town in the morning.

REDS' MANAGER WON'T QUIT

BOSTON, July 26.—(AP.)—Bob O'Farrell, catcher-manager of the Cincinnati Reds, has a strong suspicion he is about to be deposed, but is going to hang onto his job until something happens. He said:

"Where there's smoke there must be fire, but I haven't been fired yet, and I am going to carry on until President Larry MacPhail says I'm fired.

"I haven't heard from MacPhail since we were in Philadelphia, and at that time our relations were friendly enough and there was no intimation he was not satisfied with the way I was handling the club. However, if he wants to fire me, that's O. K., but I won't quit.

"I have a two-year contract with the Cincinnati club. When I signed up they promised me all kinds of assistance in the matter of new players. They have bought me just one ball player, an outfielder, who is a pretty good hitter but is so lacking in fielding ability that he's in danger of being hit by a fly ball almost every time he goes after one."

Reports from Cincinnati have named Charley Dressen, manager of the Nashville club in the Southern Association, as O'Farrell's successor and indicated he would take over the Reds on Saturday. O'Farrell does not think the change will be made in such a short time.

RIGLER HURT SECOND TIME

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Charles (Cy) Rigler, of Cleveland, veteran National League umpire, who has been recuperating from a fractured rib, today telegraphed league headquarters from North East, Pa., that he had been in an automobile accident and had suffered a broken left ankle and cuts and bruises.

Rigler had just received a schedule of his assignments and had gone to his physician to get a final physical examination before returning to duty. On the way home, his telegram said, his car was struck by a truck.

Rigler suffered the fractured ankle and Mrs. Rigler, who was driving, was severely cut and bruised. Rigler said he was home with a plaster cast on his ankle while Mrs. Rigler was in a hospital for X-ray examinations.

The broken rib was suffered during a game when he was struck by a bat which slipped from the hands of Pepper Martin, St. Louis Cardinals.

ANGSTADT ADVANCES

ANNVILLE, Pa., July 26.—(AP.)—A. W. Angstadt, of Elizabethtown, advanced to the quarter-final of the Lebanon Valley College open tennis tournament yesterday, conquering Paul Schreiner, of Lancaster, 6-3, 6-2.

SARAZEN, WATROUS EVEN AT HALFWAY MARK IN PRO DUEL

P. G. A. CHAMP PRESSED AT BUFFALO

PARK CLUB, Buffalo, July 26.—(AP.)—Gene Sarazen, of New York, and Al Watrous, of Detroit, were all even today at the halfway mark of their 36-hole second round match in the Professional Golfers' Association title chase.

They were both out in 37 to be all square at the ninth and they shot the incoming side in 34 each to remain even. They played mechanically with the exception of a sensational 25-foot putt by Watrous on the tenth and a spectacular explosion from the creek at the fifth by Sarazen, the defending champion.

After being 1 down at the turn, Craig Wood, of Hollywood, N. J., rallied on the incoming nine, shooting it in 34 to lead Harry Cooper, of Chicago, by 1 up at the end of 18 holes.

Equaling the record for the course, Denny Shute, of Philadelphia, fired a six-under-par 66 at Ky Laffoon this morning to lead the Denver youngster by 6 up at the end of the first round. Shute was out in 32 and back in 34.

Rallying on the homeward journey to wipe out a one-hole deficit, Tommy Armour, Chicago veteran, finished his morning round deadlocked with Dick Metz, another Chicagoan. Carding a 73, Armour was 1 over par for the route, Metz carded a pair of 37s for 74.

After trailing Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., four holes at the ninth, Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., put on a Garrison finish coming home to cut the deficit three holes to be 1 down when he went to lunch. Runyan had 69, one less than Ghezzi.

Believe It Or Not By Ripley

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: DICTATORS' DESIRE—The Erzberg, situated near Eisenerz, in the Austrian province of Styria, is about 5,000 feet high and consists solely of iron ore (50 per cent pure iron). It is estimated to contain more than 300,000,000 tons of ore and is the highest iron mountain in the world. Since Germany has been deprived of her pre-war ore supply the Erzberg figures very largely in Hitler's alleged plans of annexing Austria. Mussolini's Italy, which also is dependent upon foreign ore, has its eye on the Erzberg, and in the event of a war between Yugo-Slavia and Italy the Italian plans are said to already foresee a rapid invasion of Styria to get to the Erzberg ahead of the Yugo-Slavians. HELEN JACOBS IN SEABRIGHT NET FINAL

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 26.—(AP.)—Dropping only three games, Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., breezed through Mrs. Mary Orvel Harris, of Kansas City, 6-1, 6-2 today to reach the final round for the Seabright tennis bowl.

Mrs. Harris got one service game in the first set and two in the second. The national champion took only 24 minutes to run through the match and her game, particularly the chopping, was at peak form.

Carolin Babcock, of Los Angeles, Miss Jacobs' Wightman Cup teammate, made it an all-California final as she defeated Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, one of the surprises of the tournament, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4.

Carolin had to come from behind in both the second and third sets to win against an opponent who capitalized the drop shot to perfection.

Miss Babcock did not play her real game until late in the third set when, with the score 4-2 against her, she took four straight games with a brilliant display to win the set and match.

At Churchill Valley this morning a women's kickers' handicap tourney is under way, and this afternoon finds the male sex playing in an 18-hole medal-play tourney under full handicap. Golfers from other clubs are invited to play.

The proceeds of the tourneys will be devoted to the National Public Links fund. Late starters can get starting times by calling Jimmy O'Donnell at Churchill 6400. Tomorrow the women will trek to Nemacolin Country Club for an invitation tourney.

The crack California municipal golf stars, from Los Angeles, San Francisco, Santa Monica and Long Beach, led by Charley Ferrera, the defending national champion, are in town to put the finishing touches on their games in preparation for the national public links tournament, carded for the North and South county parks next week.

The delegation includes Ferrera, Bob Oppenheim, Mel Kennedy, Arthur Sato and George Studinger, of San Francisco; Bruce McCormick, Don Erickson, Johnny Ross and Stan Seymour, of Los Angeles; Bill Cady and George Lanz, of Santa Monica, and O. B. Keeter, Jim Stephenson and Bob Times, of Long Beach.

Announcement was made today that permit holders and daily fee players on the county courses will be permitted to play each day during the tournament after the field has left the starting tee.

The Duquesne Council, Knights of Columbus, is holding a medal play tournament at Stanton Heights. The event will be climaxed with a dinner in the evening.

Sun-Telegraph's Tennis Tourney Near Finals

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

An injured finger and a lame leg has caused a shift in the program of the inter-parks elimination series, classic feature of the annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh Parks net championships. The dueling has reached the semi-final stage, and the card called for Harry Wald, of Pitt, Frick Park champion, to take on Al McCabe, of Coraopolis, in a lower bracket semi-final tilt this evening at 6:15 o'clock.

McCabe, however, reported this morning with the above noted injuries and ask that the match be postponed until tomorrow evening.

Today's program, then, will be confined to a semi-final women's clashes, wherein Mrs. Jean Artzberger, city champion since 1930 and West Park victor last week, will meet Betty Recker, slim and formidable North Parker.

Elizabeth McColligan, of South, second seeded favorite, encounters Joy Hartman, Olympia hope. The remaining men's singles tussle in the bracket of four has been fixed for tomorrow at 10 a. m., when Jimmy O'Connor, of Highland, who rates No. 2 to Wald's No. 1 in the current competition, will face clever Joe Kristufek, South dark horse, who assumed the role of giant killer last evening to account for Al McCorkle, North flash and 1933 city titleholder.

Nary one of yesterday's fracases was captured easily, but by all odds the toughest was McCabe's triumph over Harry Milton, Duquesne frosh contender from Schenley, 9-7, 5-7, 6-1, 2-6, 6-4.

The women's combat in which Joy Hartman rallied to down Betty Bethune, Frick satellite, was proportionately torrid. Though the tennis in this melee was hardly spectacular, the tally of 9-11, 6-4, 6-2 indicates amply the character of the two-hour struggle.

KRISTUFEK VICTOR

Kristufek defeated McCorkle, 6-2, 6-2, 6-8, 6-2 in a long and bitterly contested match, while Wald defeated Bob Meyer, West Park star, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4.

Miss McColligan offered too much pace for Myrtle Gordon, McKeesport girl who copped at Schenley. In spite of errors, the South luminary came through the speedily wound up engagement at 6-4, 6-4. Miss Recker was pushed hard by the unorthodox, but determined Mrs. Sue Giltenboth, of Highland, and won only after travelling to 6-4, 8-6.

The summary:

Men's Singles

First round, upper half—Joe Kristufek, South, defeated S. A. McCorkle, North, 6-2, 6-2, 6-8, 6-2.

Lower half—Harry Wald, Frick, defeated Robert C. Meyer, West, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4; Alfred D. McCabe, Jr., Olympia, defeated Harry J. Milton, Schenley, 9-7, 5-7, 6-1, 2-6, 6-4.

Women's Singles

First round, upper half — Betty M. Recker, North, defeated Mrs. Sue Giltenboth, Highland, 6-4, 8-6.

Lower half—Elizabeth McColligan, South, defeated Myrtle Gordon, Schenley, 6-4, 6-4; Joy Hartman, Olympia, defeated Betty Bethune, Frick, 9-11, 6-4, 6-2.

Suspected Slayer Death Ride Victim

CHICAGO, July 26.—(AP.)—Apparently at the end of a one-way ride, the body of Samuel Serpa, 37, was found in a street last night with an inch-long wound in his right temple. The body evidently had been tossed from a speeding car.

Serpa was wanted, police said, in Philadelphia and Camden, N. J., for several murders, including the killing of Edward D'Alonzo, and the shooting of Policeman Stockberger, both in Philadelphia.

U. S. HORSES SCORE WINS

TORONTO, July 26.—(AP.)—Hollyrood Sara, owned by Ben F. White, of Lexington, Ky., and driven by Harry Stokes, of Goshe, N. Y., won the six William Mulock stake, 2:17 pace valued at $1,000, as the Grand Circuit meeting at Thorncliffe Park closed yesterday.

YANKS CUT DETROIT'S LEAD DESPITE CRIPPLED LINEUP

TIGERS SUFFER 9-TO-7 DEFEAT BY RED SOX

Associated Press.

Unless there is a sudden change in the luck of the American League clubs, the 1934 campaign may become known as the "hospital season" of big league baseball.

Starting with the pre-season mishap in which Rabbit Maranville broke his leg, there has been a steady trail of injuries through both major circuits. Much of Washington's decline can be attributed to various injuries; there are difficulties such as those which have kept Lefty Grove from pitching his usual brand of ball for the Red Sox and now comes Earle Combs' crash into a St. Louis fence which has cost the Yankees the services of their fleet outfielder and left them in a precarious position as regards to the pennant race.

YANKS CUT LEAD

The Yanks refused to be dismayed by the loss of Combs and promptly stepped out yesterday to defeat the Browns 5 to 4 and reduce Detroit's lead to a single game when the Red Sox bludgeoned out a 9-to-7 decision over the Tigers. But the game only served to emphasize the plight of the New York club, which is already seeking another player to replace Combs.

Babe Ruth, still bothered by the leg injury he suffered in Cleveland and at the best only a part-time player, had to step into action. Then Ben Chapman was forced out by a recurrence of the charley horse which has troubled him. Dixie Walker, one of the few outfield reserves, is troubled by a weak arm. It was Sammy Byrd, leader of the Yanks' replacements, who finally settled yesterday's argument. He plastered Ed Wells, a former Yank, for a home run with two aboard in the sixth to provide the winning runs.

Detroit made one big bid for victory by landing on Wes Ferrell with both feet in the second inning to score six runs and tie the count after Boston had pummeled Eldon Auker around in the first two frames. The Tigers went ahead in the fifth but failed to survive the Red Sox's closing drive when Roy Johnson doubled off Schoolboy Rowe in the ninth to send home the winning run and Charley Gehringer's error let another tally count.

SENATORS BLANKED

George Earnshaw pitched the Chicago White Sox to their first shutout victory of the season as he blanked Washington, 4 to 0, and Cleveland walloped the Athletics, 8 to 3, at Cleveland.

The Boston Braves took two games from Cincinnati in the National League, winning the first game 2 to 1 and the second 7 to 3. All other National league contests were rained out.

Personalities In Softball

Louis (Lemons) Pugliano, who earned nine sport letters while attending Fifth Avenue High, where he was graduated two years ago, is the mainstay of the Commercial Garage team, which is in the running for the Bracket V championship of the Senior Division in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's amateur softball tournament. He won four letters in basketball, two each at soccer and football and one in baseball. Although he is only a little more than five feet tall, his fielding at shortstop has been spectacular. Lemons has a powerful peg to first base. He is a good hitter.

L. Pugliano

Joe White, who captains the Harris Reds team, in Bracket III in the Senior Division, has been playing a fine game at first base and hitting hard. He played with the Beaver Falls Elks baseball team some years ago. Although his team does not have a chance of getting into the softball playoffs, it will play its seventh and last game today against the East Liberty Drugs. The Reds have won two games and lost four.

MARKS TAKES JUNIOR GOLF LAURELS

It was a thrilling match throughout, with both players displaying in and out golf. Both were out in 42 strokes, six over par. Evans was 2 up at the turn.

The brand of golf picked up a little on the last nine, Marks shooting a 36, while Evans took a 39. Two down, Marks won the eleventh, halved the twelfth, won the thirteenth with a par 3 and halved the fourteenth and fifteenth in par figures.

He took the lead on the sixteenth with a 5, while Evans took a 6, lost the seventeenth, when Evans had a par 3, and halved the home hole with a birdie 4.

STEVENSON VICTOR

On the extra hole both had good drives, with Evans in the short rough. Both were short with their second shots, Marks pitched to the green, but Evans missed his chip, and then missed a second time. Marks took two putts for a 5, while Evans missed his five-footer for a 6.

Bill Stevenson, of the Wenango Country Club, defeated G. H. Morse in the final for the second division prize, 5 and 4. R. A. McLaughlin, of the Pittsburgh Field Club, won the consolation prize, defeating C. Haller, of the home club, 3 and 2.

Miss Katherine McLaughlin and Jerry Ryan cracked the course record at Schenley yesterday as they led a field of 74 players in a benefit mixed foursome tournament. They turned in a score of 72, five over par. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schaefer finished second with 80-17—63.

The proceeds of the match were turned over to the national public links tournament fund.

TOURNEY SCORES

SENIOR DIVISION

Bracket III

Campbell Lunch 16—O'Toole Club 9

Bracket VII

Weise Newsies... 9—Snubs 6

By PHIL GRABOWSKI

The Elizabeth Produce-Ardmore Gardens game in Bracket IV of the senior division will feature today's play in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's Western Pennsylvania amateur softball tournament. Both teams are still in the undefeated ranks. A win for the Produce outfit will give it the bracket title. The Ardmores have won five straight games while the Elizabeth team won six. This game will be staged on the Central Heights Park Field at 7 o'clock. Ray Hackett probably will pitch for the Produce team.

Anos Anderson will be sent to the mound for the Adams Bottles against the Helm and Turners in a Bracket VI conflict to be played at Kittanning. Anderson has won four games and lost one for the Adams team.

Manager Clyde Confer's Harris Reds will meet the twice-beaten East Liberty Drugs in Bracket III of the senior competition on the Hampton Field.

The Fort Black Community Club will endeavor to defeat the Snubs A. C. today to get a tie for the leadership in Bracket V of the senior division. A defeat will put the Blacks in a tie for second place with the Elwyns. If the Community team wins it will meet the Commercials tomorrow to decide the bracket champion.

Anthony (Bullet) Oskin won his sixth straight game as the Campbell Lunch Shamrocks slugged their way to a 16-9 victory over the Stephen A. O'Toole Club in a ragged contest in Bracket III of the senior division on the O'Toole Field, Hazelwood, yesterday before one of the largest crowds that ever witnessed a soft-ball game in that sector. This victory gave the Campbells undisputed possession of first place.

John (Duke) Stenzel hit a home run with the bases loaded in the third inning to enable the Weis Newsies clinch the Bracket VII championship of the senior division by downing the Staabs, 9 to 6, yesterday.

SOFTBALL SLANTS

John Augustine, manager of the Peerless team, which plays in Bracket VI of the senior division, is requested to call New Kensington 9445 and ask for Smith or Bradley.

Get out your copy of the Official Softball Rules and make Rule 21, Section 5, read as follows:

"On an overthrow at first, third or home into foul territory or any play which results from a fairly-hit ball (the base-runner shall be entitled to advance one base without liability of being put out); provided, that if the ball is blocked by any obstruction such as spectators, benches, bleachers, etc., the base-runner shall also be entitled to one additional base besides the one to which he is running. If the ball is not blocked, the base-runner may take one additional base besides the one to which he is running, but must make the extra base. The advance of the base-runner shall be determined by the base which he occupied when the pitch started."

Add to Section 6 of the same rule:

"Except that no runner may score from third except as provided in Rule 24."

Honus Says:

By HONUS WAGNER,
Former Star, Now Coach at Pirates.

To the Sports Editor:

You know people as a rule are pretty envious of other people if they think the others are better off than they are. But I haven't heard one single person begrudge the President his vacation. I think people have finally got the idea that the job of being President isn't very easy and they are glad to see him go away and enjoy himself so that he will come back ready to start in again where he left off. But I also get the idea that he's the sort of chap who cannot forget his work. I'll bet he puts in plenty of hours on that battleship working for the people he represents.

Regards,
HONUS WAGNER.

GAME COMEBACK KEEPS U. S. IN CUP FIGHT

WIMBLEDON, England, July 26.—(AP.)—Completing as glorious a comeback as ever was seen in the history of the Davis Cup, Sidney B. Wood, Jr., and Francis Xavier Shields blasted Australia's singles aces, Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, off Wimbledon's famous center court to carry the United States into the challenge round against England.

Wood, whose fighting heart must be as big as a powder cask, first saved the day by winning the fifth set of a beautiful two-day duel with Crawford, to take the crucial fourth match 6-3, 9-7, 4-6, 4-6, 6-2, and tie the series at two matches all. Then Shields, true to his promise, battered McGrath into submission in three terific sets, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4. Thus the final tally was 3 to 2 for the United States.

George Lott, who with Lester Stoefen, started the United States comeback by winning the doubles on Monday, said:

"It's another of those teams of destiny, and this isn't all we're going to win. Tennis like that will beat Fred Perry (Fred Perry, leader of the defending English team) or anybody else."

The character of the tennis played by the two Americans is best summed up by William T. (Big Bill) Tilden, who has seen a lot of it played. He exclaimed:

"The best tennis I ever saw."

Capt. Dick Williams was as happy as though he had won the games himself and said the same lineup would go against England in the first singles matches Saturday.

The draw for the matches will not be made until tomorrow, but Perry said the English team would line up as expected, with himself and H. W. (Bunny) Austin playing singles and he and George Patrick Hughes the doubles.

THIS IS WHERE I WAS MADE!
All the whiskies that go into Paul Jones Rye are made in Maryland, where the finest Rye has always been made. There the limestone water peculiar to Maryland works with plump, rich grain to give that rare Maryland flavor.

STOCKS BREAK $1 TO $10 ON WAR SCARE

NEW YORK, July 26.—(AP.)—Financial markets wilted today under European war clouds and a general revival of trading pessimism.

Stocks catapulted 1 to around 10 points or so at their worst, when rumors spread through Wall street that Italian troops had marched into Austria. While prices were irregularly lower at the start, there was a downward swoop in the second hour which put the ticker tape several minutes behind floor transactions and resulted in the worst break since last September.

Grains and cotton, steady to firm at the beginning, turned backward with securities. Most of the cereals showed losses of 1 to more than 2 cents a bushel. Rubber and silver lagged. Pressure was renewed against secondary bonds, especially those of the railroad category, and many severe recessions were recorded. German, Austrian and Italian loans were unusually heavy. Foreign exchanges were irregular.

Scores of shares, notably those known as "pivotal" leaders, went into new low ground for the year or longer. Selling dried up for a brief time around noon, then the slide was resumed at an accelerated pace.

The most severe of the stock casualties included National Lead and United States Smelting, off around 10 points each. Union Pacific, Case, Allied Chemical and Armour of Illinois preferred yielded 6 to 7.

A flood of margin calls found numerous small speculators without the inclination or the funds to bolster their accounts, and much of the liquidation was attributed to this source. A considerable increase in the short position was also reported by commission houses.

Brokers with foreign connections said there had been no exceptional liquidation of shares held abroad, and in some quarters this was interpreted favorably. The bright side of this theory was that, with the Continent highly disturbed, holders of equities there would not be inclined to sell, but probably would expand their commitments in the United States on the belief that, under the circumstances, funds would be safer in America.

While the European picture had much of the aspects of 1914, and it was admitted by most foreign observers that dire results were entirely possible, conservative banking circles held out hopes that the more serious consequences might be avoided.

Much of the early selling in equities was attributed to holders who apparently were discouraged by the fact that the market yesterday failed to respond substantially to the speech of Chairman Kennedy, of the Exchange Control Commission, which was characterized by most commentators as "highly conservative." The satisfactory tone of the speech, it was said, seemingly was not sufficient to offset the nervousness over current trade trends, drought damage, foreign affairs and other somewhat bearish influences.

GRAIN VALUES DROP LOWER

CHICAGO, July 26.—Grains went lower in price early today, responsive to cooler weather and showers, but advances quickly followed. Bulls contended that irreparable damage done both to wheat and to corn made ultimate higher quotations inevitable.

Opening ⅜ off to ⅛ up, September new 99-99½, wheat afterward sagged further, and then rose all around. Corn started 1¼ to ¾ down, September 66-66¼, and subsequently scored gains.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The raw sugar market was quiet early today and no fresh business was reported. After opening 1 point lower to 2 points higher, the futures market held steady during the balance of the forenoon. Although price changes were confined to narrow limits, there was further liquidation in the September position through houses with Wall street connections, and selling by producing interests in the later deliveries, but the offerings were readily absorbed by local shorts and Cuban interests.

Refined sugar was unchanged and, aside from a continued good withdrawal demand, business was light. Prices were quoted at 4.75 for fine granulated by refiners, while second hand sugars were available at 4.70.

SOUND MONEY HITS STOCK PRICES

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, July 26.—The fact that our congressmen are scattered in the four corners of the continent is no longer regarded as a bull argument in Wall street.

Mr. Rukeyser

But recently the financial district has apparently missed the shouters on capitol hill.

After a prolonged dullness, the market turned weak last week on indications that the huge treasury financing program up to the end of the year would necessitate an "orthodox monetary" policy.

This led to the throwing overboard of silver stocks and other inflationary issues, followed by an episode of general bearishness.

It must be recognized that those financiers, who consider "inflation" bullish for stocks, long ago became aware that they had an ally in Congress.

Before adjournment, it was apparent that Congress was more radical on inflation than the Executive.

GIVES FEW JOBS

The philosophy of "soaking the rich" has provided few, if any, new jobs for the needy.

The administration sought to prime the engine through heavy government spending, yet at the same time a spontaneous forward movement was discouraged by political attacks on business and business profits.

In alluding to the social aspects of business profits, Mr. Flanders, in the Nation's Business, adds:

"Profit is safe, and profit is necessary. We are so organized that, if we guard the three channels by which it may escape, it cannot fail to flow through the whole industrial structure and support in growing comfort the multitudes depending on it. In so doing it will inevitably tend to a broader distribution that is on a higher level.

"Profit is necessary for the social program. If encouraged, it can grow beyond any previous experience, and these more widely distributed returns can easily support the taxation needed."

LABOR PARTNERS

Employers can best meet strike threats by preventive methods; they should have the good sense to give labor its full share of their productivity. Then they should follow up by regularly taking their workers into their confidence and telling them how the economic fluctuations are affecting their common interests.

Numerous ironmasters were backward in their labor poncies, and quickly turned to the company union idea when collective bargaining under the NIRA became the law of the land.

Under the farseeing leadership of Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem Steel Corporation formulated definite machinery for improving employe relationships 16 years ago. It therefore was in no need of improvising a hasty setup.

In a current bulletin to employes, Mr. Grace pointed out:

"It is encouraging to note how industry generally is taking hold and adopting these same principles. Much of the new labor legislation has the same objective which our plans accomplish. One of the best ways for us to co-operate with our government is for us to continue to maintain, the close harmonious relationships which exist between employes and management, settling our problems as they arise from day to day within the company and not allowing them to grow to serious proportions through inattention or delay."

In connection with the current slump in the steel industry, Mr. Grace said that it would be the policy of the company to share the work.

Spokesmen for capital have long prated about the partnership with labor. But too few have followed through and treated workers as partners and discussed frankly with them the business trend and its probable effect on their joint interests.

Cast Into Eden

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

CHAPTER VI.

There came suddenly the rapid clangor of what must have been a very large bell. It sounded no great distance away. The notes were deep but muffled as if the bell were being thumped by some substance not hard enough to strike a clear note. Also this pounding was irregular, both in its spacing and in the force of the successive blows.

Linda said, "Another nutty performance."

"It tells us something though."

"I knew it already. We've pitched on to an isolated reservation for lunatics."

"There may be something in that."

"Plenty. Whatever dinky republic this island belongs to has rounded up its crazy nuisances and dumped them out here. This is the keeper's residence and he's gone off somewhere."

"There must be somebody in charge. That bell is probably where they're quartered."

She went on. "They're given the run of the island but taught to keep away from these premises. All the same you'd scarcely think he'd leave them without a keeper."

A horrible thought occurred to Jerome but he kept it to himself. He wondered if the island could be not only a dumping ground for mentally afflicted but also a leper colony. That would explain its immunity from the danger of trespass. It might be a sort of Caribbean Molakai. An isolation colony for the undesirables amongst whom might be a number who had lost their reason, whether through disease or other causes.

Argue Over Boat

Linda said, "If these creatures are prisoners you'd think they'd have tried to get away in our boat instead of merely setting her adrift. Pity you couldn't have kept your eye on her."

He retorted, "It's a pity you couldn't have lent a hand to help patch her up instead of going half a mile down the beach and staying there."

"You might have known I'd had all I could stand of you without a breathing spell before the next hitch."

"Yes, and what's come of it?"

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

Here was another problem Jerome could not answer. He turned to cooking the eggs and getting some biscuits out in silence. The spasmodic clanging of the bell continued. Some of the notes were short and muffled, others louder and angled. Then as if to add maliciously to the discordance the raucous cry with its jeering quality burst out again. This time before it died away others that were shriller and syncopated joined the medley. The macaw called in its harsh voice, then flew away.

Linda said, with the irritability that is provoked by fear that one resents, "That doesn't sound like anything human to me."

Both Afraid

She glared at him sharply. "You're scared yourself. Why not admit it?"

He refrained from telling her just why he was in a state of such clammy dread. To be marooned on an isolated reservation for lunatic natives was bad enough, but the idea that they might also be crazed from loathsome disease and hopelessness and isolation was infinitely worse.

But he said reassuringly, "This man who lives here is probably a doctor in charge. He may be studying these cases and trying out some sort of cure. He's not apt to be long away. Let's eat and then go up and overhaul his library."

The distant clamor stopped suddenly. They finished their breakfast undisturbed. The greatest trial now was lack of foot wear. There seemed no way to supply this need.

They went back to look over the house more thoroughly but there was nothing much to search except the chests securely locked. The bookshelves contained only books. The armoires and the drawers of the desk proved to be empty until Jerome found in the last one opened a curious object. This was a steel hook securely set in around wooden block which was encircled by a heavy leather cuff with a strap attached.

Hand Cut Off

"What's that thing?" Linda asked.

"Do you remember Capt. Cuttle?"

"No—but I do recall Capt. Hook in Peter Pan. Yes, that's what it is."

"He's lost a right hand," Jerome said.

"Why a right hand?"

"Out in the store room there was a steel fishing rod on some pegs. I noticed that the reel was rigged to use left-handed. The cork butt was scored and worn in a ring where he'd gripped it with the hook. You can do a lot with a hook, but a gentleman wouldn't care to wear it in public. When he goes ashore he probably wears a gloved artificial hand."

"Do you think he's a doctor?"

"There are some medical books—comparative anatomy, biology and botany. There's a big book on natural remedies to be found in different latitudes."

Synopsis

Jerome Crain, young naval architect, and a wealthy society girl, named Linda, are guests aboard the yacht owned by the millionaire, Thomas Tucker, anchored at San Cristobal. Jerome and Linda are bored with one another and when the other guests go ashore, the young couple, each believing the other had gone, stays on board. One of the sailors contracts fever and the yacht is quarantined. No one is allowed to come aboard or leave. Jerome and Linda escape in a skiff, landing on a strange island. Linda wanders off while Jerome repairs the boat. Later, he finds her scantily clad, the clothes she took off to dry missing. Linda and Jerome have the uncomfortable feeling of being followed. Then an eerie cry issues from the jungle. Frightened, they hurry back to the beach in time to see their boat—which Jerome had tied securely—drifting away and most of his clothes gone, too. Searching for the mysterious person, or persons, responsible for their plight, they come upon a small plantation and a house which has a carefully tended yet vacant look.

Now Go On

Junior Patrol Mail Box

Next Tuesday is the annual Junior Patrol picnic, fellows! That's July 31—last day of the month—so it will be easy to remember. And the place is big, shady West View Park.

Tell your parents, or your patrol sponsor about it right now. You'll want to plan the lunch and make all the other arrangements way beforehand.

Remember last year's big, swell picnic? This one ought to be better in every way. The Sun-Telegraph started to print coupons good for free tickets yesterday and there are more in the paper today. Watch for them! We hope lots of patrols can go to the park all in a bunch, and picnic together. And be sure to wear your Junior Patrol badges.

Today is your last chance to enter the current contest, fellows. The subject is: "What is the best outing you have ever had?" Write your answer in a letter of not more than 100 words. Prizes are $2.50, $1.50 and $1. Just send your letter to the Junior Patrol contest, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

Remember, only Junior Patrol members can enter, so if you haven't sent in your signed-up pledge, do it now, so as to be eligible for next week's big contest—with an entirely different subject.

To be in this contest, your letter must be here at Sun-Telegraph Junior Patrol headquarters before midnight tonight. So write that prize-winning letter now.

You remember last week's contest to find the best good deeds? Well, here is the third prize winning letter: from Dorothy Smith, of 67 Vilsack street, West Etna. She writes:

"I always look carefully when crossing the street. As I was a crossing a street one day I saw a small kitten standing in the middle. There was a car coming about one hundred yards away. I ran out and seized the kitten and put it on the sidewalk. It followed me home. I liked it very much. One day my girl friend asked me for it. I did not want to be selfish so I gave it to her."

Stepping Out :: Daily Short Short-Story

By ARCHIE G. JOHNSON

Glenda patted down a handful of soil around the exposed roots of the sweet corn shoots. In pulling a deep-rooted weed a clod of dirt came up, leaving a hole as big as an egg. The hole was close enough to the shoots to uncover dozens of tiny hair-like roots.

A sigh escaped her. Gardening was proving to be everything she hadn't expected. It had seemed romantic before she and Paul were married to think of raising garden stuff, of having sweet-smelling flower beds alive with color. A garden, flowers and a cottage had seemed as necessary as a wedding ring to fulfill their dream romance.

She looked at the row of string beans. The weeds were almost as high as the spindly plants. The cucumbers, radishes and lettuce were the same way.

"Isn't it terrible how the weeds grow?" Helen Momsen called. "I'm going to make Pete take me to Bellevue one of these nights. I've been gardening and fixing the lawn and flower beds until I think I deserve a night out!"

In her mind Glenda pictured the Casino, Grotto Rendezvous and many other places Paul had taken her before they were married. A yearning for the glitter and romance of the bygone days came back.

"I guess Bellevue is quite a place," she replied non-committally.

"Why don't you and Paul go with us sometime?" Mrs. Momsen suggested. "We go there often."

"Maybe we will." It came to Glenda that her's and Paul's second wedding anniversary was only two days away. "If you go in a day or two. It's our wedding anniversary Saturday. We should celebrate."

The lights were dim, radiating a deep green glow through the crepe paper covering of the low-watt bulbs. The dancing couples, many of them grateful for the privacy of the semi-darkness, swayed and whirled as the orchestra throbbed out popular melodies.

Pete Momsen's arm tightened around Glenda's waist and his lips brushed her cheek. It was an invitation, she knew, to turn her head ever so little. Then their lips would meet. Instead, she kept her head turned away.

"What would your wife say," he laughted, "if she saw us?"

"What does it matter? You're sweet. I want to hold you close."

"She might try to get revenge," Glenda hantered, not taking up the half-serious answers she received. "She might pull up all my garden stuff some dark night. Maybe newlyweds can live on love, but I can't. I've been married two years."

A crash of cymbals ended the dance.

"I felt too dizzy to dance," Helen confessed. "You don't mind my sitting out with Paul?" She looked unsteadily at Glenda.

It seemed to Glenda life was a crazy-quilt pattern with no answer. Helen wondering "if any jealousy had been aroused by sitting out a dance with Paul, Pete trying to kiss her, Helen not wondering about Pete at all. Paul seeming to be having the time of his life.

"Of course, I don't mind," Glenda said quickly.

The white-jacketed waiter brought four glasses on a tray. He seemed to know Pete. He set one glass before each of the four and spoke to Pete.

"This is on the house."

Pete turned toward Glenda. "Ronny must have read my mind about that highball I suggested." Helen looked at the full glass in front of her, at the one in her hand. "It's a good thing the garden doesn't need weeding tomorrow. I couldn't tell a tomato plant from a rhubarb." Her head nodded jerkily.

Glenda felt a warm tingle spread over her. Her eyes began to feel light. Paul took the half-filled glass from her, and poured half of what was left in Pete's glass and the rest in his own.

"We're going to Bellevue tonight. You and Paul might as well go along."

Glenda thought of the last trip. Pete was trying to kiss her. Ordinarily he wouldn't have done that. He was naturally shy. It was the highballs and music that had made him bold.

Helen—wondering not about Pete, as she should have been—wondering instead if she had aroused any jealousy by sitting out a dance with Paul.

"Not tonight." She smiled her thanks. "The string beans won't amount to a thing if they aren't weeded."

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Seamstress

Sitting with fingers flying, flying
Over the organdy, over the lace,
Bending till gold in the sky is dying,
Never to skyward lifting her face;
Fashioning ruffles, frills and flowers,
Frocks that will billow and swirl in the dance . . .
What does she think of through long, bright hours,
Sewing a seam that will spell romance?

Sitting with needle, sinking, sinking
Into the satin, smooth and white,
Under the harsh lights, what is she thinking,
Sewing patiently into the night?
Making a robe that by dawn will cover
Fair young flesh and a slender form,
Destined never for arms of lover,
Never for kisses sweet and warm;
What is she thinking while stars are wheeling,
Silver-bright in a sapphire sky,
She whose face shows no gleam revealing
Sun or planets are marching by?

If one of the Redbirds knocked the ball into the field, it was likely to be the same as a home run, as none of the girls in the field could throw it back to the diamond, they had to get it back in relays.

See the Little Birdies

This gliding business is very fascinating and simple. All you have is a pair of wings and a wild desire to succeed.

You ain't got any more engine than a dead bullfrog. It's simple. You start off a hill. Go up in the air. And try to find the hill again.

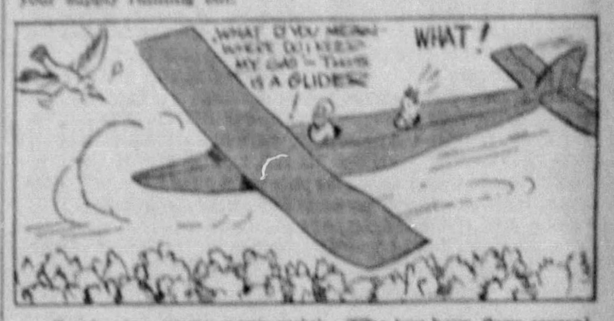
If it gets any more popular, we may have a national soar week. First you soar, and stay soar.

The pilots are intrepid. They don't even carry parachutes. A parachute slows you up too much coming down.

The gliders are as light as feathers and just as reliable. You go where the wind goes, on wings shaped like those of a sea gull. There is nothing to worry about when the wind gulls you out over the ocean. Not having any gasoline, you don't have to worry about your supply running out.



Soaring is a young man's racket. The boys have flown several hundred miles without power, even though the record is held by a Kansas farmer clinging to the roof of his barn.

A glider is made of birchwood and silk fabrics. It figures to melt in the rain like fish food.

There are safer methods of travel, but none quite so private.

Nevertheless, we shall continue to grip the ground with our five-toed turf slappers. We are way past the age when man feels the urge to sew chicken feathers on a dog's collar and invite the neighbors to whip him until he soars into the clouds.

We like to read about reckless lads gliding over the tree tops. If we ever get anywhere in that vicinity, it will be because a posse caught up to us with a rope.

In the meantime, our congratulations to the gliding pioneers who have conquered the law of gravitaxtion. We didn't study in that law office. Thirty years ago we stood on a hill and flapped our shoulder-blades 15 times. When we failed to take off, we gave up the idea. But no man can say we didn't try.

No Pity for Pennsylvania

Washington Seems Determined to Force the Legislature to Meet and Impose New Taxes

Washington remains merciless.

That, in effect, is the message of Joseph F. Guffey and David L. Lawrence, Democratic leaders, who went to the national capital in a vain attempt to persuade the administration to withdraw Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins' ultimatum that, unless the commonwealth matches the United States government's contributions, all federal relief for Pennsylvania's unemployed will cease after August.

Messrs. Guffey and Lawrence were told that federal relief would be continued during the fall and winter if the state engaged itself with a definite plan to pay half the bill. Gov. Gifford Pinchot and the present Legislature pass out of office at the end of the year and, of course, cannot enter into commitments that will be binding on the next administration. Hence it seems there is no way out except for the Legislature to meet in special session to deal with the emergency.

Pennsylvania pays one-tenth of all federal taxes. Even if the state were not to raise a single cent in addition for unemployment relief, our normal contributions to the United States treasury not only would pay for federal relief contributions to Pennsylvania but to many oher states as well.

But Washington refuses to consider this. It also refuses to recognize the fact that Pennsylvania, as primarily an industrial state of mills and mines, has been harder hit by industrial depression than most states and has a larger percentage of its citizens in the ranks of the unemployed than will be found in the agricultural states of the West and South.

Our protest, too, against the injustice of having to pay half of the federal relief bill in Pennsylvania, when a dozen southern states are having the entire load carried by the Washington government, falls on deaf ears. Why should Pennsylvania have to pay half when Indiana and Illinois pay only 25 per cent?

No other conclusion can be drawn than that the administration is deliberately out to punish Pennsylvania for having gone for Hoover. What other reason can there possibly be for this unrelenting discrimination against the state, which has been shown not only in relief matters but also in the Public Works Administration and Civil Works Administration grants?

As has been well said, the "new deal" for us in these matters has been a "raw deal."

If the administration is out to embarrass the Republican leaders in Pennsylvania and help the Democrats, one might have supposed that it would have acceded to the plea of Messrs. Guffey and Lawrence and put them in position to claim the credit for saving the people of the state from a costly legislative session and new taxes.

It is no wonder that the question is being asked if Washington is withholding federal funds from Pennsylvania because Republican officials would handle them.

If the relief of human misery is being held up by selfish political considerations, it is a sad commentary on the morals of the politicians.

Allegheny Flood Control

The Monongahela's Sister Valley Also Needs Protection from High Water

An additional seven millions of dollars has been allotted by the Public Works Administration to the Tygart River reservoir project in West Virginia, bringing the total to ten millions, and the prospect is that actual construction will start in the fall.

As the reservoir is designed to prevent floods and aid navigation in the Monongahela Valley, Pittsburgh is interested and gratified.

But it is impossible to understand why the government, having thus put its hand to the plow, shows no disposition to complete the furrow. The job will be only half done so long as the Allegheny River is left without flood control. The need for protective reservoirs in the sister valley is fully as great as it is in the Monongahela; for the Allegheny is a longer stream, has a greater volume of water, and when it gets out of bounds does more damage than the Monongahela.

Nothing has been heard of late concerning the activities of the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh. We hope that it does not feel that with the Tygart River reservoir assured it can afford to rest on its laurels.

While the Allegheny Valley remains unprotected there is work for it to do.

And even if it should be considered hopeless to try to obtain additional funds from the PWA, the Flood Commission still has an opportunity to further its incomplete program by striving to get Congress interested.

A new Congress is to be elected in November. The candidates are receptive to suggestions which they think have the support of public opinion. Why not take advantage of this to build up sentiment which may result in Congressional action for the protection of the Allegheny Valley?

Protect Our Wine Trade

The Flow of Liquor from Defaulting Debtor Countries Should Be Stopped

If the full economic benefits of repeal are to be realized by the people of the United States, the buying public must learn to appraise the imported label properly.

Wine experts agree as to the vast potentialities of the domestic wine industry, if the people and the government will give it a chance.

Recognizing the opportunities for wide employment in the vineyards of California and in the domestic wineries, the Hearst newspapers urge the President to make use of his new discretionary tariff policy to raise to the limit the tariff on foreign wines.

Unless he does this, the economic benefits of repeal will be enjoyed more in France and in Italy than in the United States.

Floyd Gibbons, in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, demonstrated that American wines are superior to the VIN ORDINAIRE which our tourists buy in Europe.

Social leaders can help the infant industry by setting an example in serving domestic wines at their dinner parties.

Once the public feels that it's smart to drink American, the full economic benefits of the new freedom will be attained.

The administration at Washington should take the leadership in this movement, and erect tariff barriers to discourage the flow of wines and liquors from defaulting debtor countries, which do not deserve our patronage.

As the American people "read, mark, learn and inwardly digest" the conclusions and recommendations of the distinguished committee which has just completed a most comprehensive and painstaking study of aviation as an agency of national defense, they will be impressed by the competency of the chairman and other members of the committee for the task assigned to them by the Secretary of War, with the hearty approval of the President.

Like the Morrow Board, appointed by President Coolidge in 1925 to study "the best means of developing and applying aircraft in national defense," the special air corps committee selected by Secretary Dern had as its chairman an eminent civilian and a majority of civilian members.

For chairman of this committee, the fifteenth federal agency since the Great War to make a study of aviation as an agency of national defense, Secretary Dern drafted Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, President Wilson's war-time Secretary of War. Mr. Baker's deep interest in national defense has continued ever since his retirement from the cabinet.

Clarence Chamberlin On Committee

THE other civilian members of the Baker committee brought to its deliberations an expert knowledge and extensive experience that effectively supplemented the special qualifications of the five military experts who made up the minority.

Clarence D. Chamberlain, of New York, who became an aviator during the Great War and served in the aviation section of the Army Signal Corps from 1917 to 1919. This justly famous trans-Atlantic flyer, aviation enthusiast, engineer and inventor, is a man of rare courage, sound judgment and broad knowledge of aviation.

James H. Doolittle, of Missouri, made a brilliant record as an officer of the Army Air Corps before he resigned to continue his service for aviation as a civilian expert. He was the first aviator in this or any other country to make a landing without being able to see the field as he approached it. He has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross with oak leaf. He was the winner of the Schneider trophy race in 1925, the Mackay trophy in 1926, the Harmon trophy in 1930 and the Bendix trophy race in 1931. In the same year he was the holder of the coast-to-coast flying record.

Edgar S. Correll, of Missouri, is not only one of the earliest of American military aviators but as a distinguished officer of the Army Air Corps he was the man who actually formulated the basic principles for the expansion of our two dozen aviators in 1917, to the tremendous force which this country created for aerial activities in the Great War.

Won Distinguished Service Medal

HE became a junior military aviator in 1915, served with the first aerial squadron of Gen. Pershing's expedition to Mexico in 1915-16. During the Great War he served at general headquarters of the A. E. F. as adviser to the chief of operations on all that pertained to the use of our air forces in France. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for most excellent service as a member of the United States aeronautical mission and was a member of the air service with the general staff of the A. E. F. His expert knowledge of military aviation gained with the colors has been reinforced since he left the Army after the armistice by extensive service and success in the world of industry.

Dr. Karl Taylor Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, is an eminent scientist well known to all Americans. He served as an aeronautical engineer in the Army in 1917 and as an associate scientific attache of the American embassy in Paris in 1918. Since that time he has been chairman and member of important committees on communications and transit and deeply interested and active in the development of American aviation.

Dr. George William Lewis has been a member of the national advisory committee for aeronautics since 1919 and its director of aeronautical research. His wide acquaintance with the advance of aviation not only in this country, but throughout the world, qualify him to give invaluable advice about the development of aircraft and aviation instruments, as well as their design, development, testing and procurement.

These are the civilian experts who, in association with a representative group of military experts, have just completed three months' intensive study of military aviation in particular and the development of aviation throughout the world. They took the testimony of 105 witnesses, representing the best available civilian, naval and military thought on aviation and making a printed record of more than 4,000 pages.

LISTEN, WORLD!

We're Too Specialized

There's an epidemic of infantile paralysis in the town near my ranch, so we've gone into voluntary quarantine. For the next six weeks, perhaps more, we'll be isolated in these 400 wild mountain acres.

There are 17 of us—10 adults, seven little children — scattered over the place. As on most California ranches, we're of mixed races. Three of the adults can't speak English at all, three others very imperfectly.

That means more than an inability to understand our language. It implies—as you'll know if you've ever pioneered—an inability to understand the whole background of American life. Our ideas on sanitation—our necessity for initiative—our balanced recklessness and caution in the face of danger.

All in all, it will be a throwback to the times I knew as a girl—when California was a real frontier, and the few Americans had their hands more than full of responsibility.

This isn't the first time I've been in a jam like this. If you have what it takes, it's a lot of fun. I've been up since daylight this morning at a score of jobs. Since it's chancey to bring in outside help, I'm doing the cooking for the gang. Lucky I like it!

Mountain cooking is a problem. No delicatessen just around the corner—no markets heaped with fresh fruit and vegetables at the other end of a 'phone line. As a matter of fact, we haven't even a 'phone. Eight miles from town—the telephone company can't or won't see its way clear to giving us service except at plutocrat rates. When the epidemic lifts we'll go at the job ourselves—tree stringing.

In the meantime, we've hired a rider who'll bring our letters and wires by night. In an emergency we can get out of here by plane. There's a field near—we're saving toward getting our own crate next year. They're becoming indispensable for news writers.

Getting back to the kitchen stove—which is where I've been all morning—there's a big kick in working out varied menus with the few simple things you can store in a rock cellar, under the roots of a big pine. What quaint ideas city people have about ranch cooking—imagining you pick it off a vine! Actually, there's no harder place to devise an attractive diet. Which—if you like it—makes it all the more interesting.

In between creaming eggs, making corn bread, baking noodles with cheese sauce, stewing prunes with cloves, oranges and lemons, cut paper thin, baking apple pies and six loaves of bread—I've mixed a vat of paint for the new office building, cut out a house dress, made some cough medicine, set out gladioli and nailed up a couple of shelves.

By one I had my three meals either eaten or prepared and everything shipshape. Now I've my two columns to write, a book to review, an article for a radio magazine and a hundred letters to answer. Also, if I can get in the time, a couple of cartoons to draw.

For the next few weeks this will be my program, if we all have the good luck to stay well. In case of illness, there'll be nursing, too.

The men will be even busier. Rock wall building, dry cultivating with the tractor, fencing the west forty, grading and oiling the new strip of road, yanking brush, shingling—and, of course, always watching out for fire and guarding our precious water supply which, like everything else, is home service.

Some program! Nothing unusual in it for me, or most of my generation. We were trained for emergencies like this.

But I wonder, sometimes, how modern youngsters manage. They've a quaint notion that they're efficient and resourceful, but actually they're the most helpless generation the race has ever seen. Nor is it their fault! They're the maimed product of a machine age.

The girls and young women who are constantly coming and going here—just what would they do if they were stranded on a desert island? They're intelligent, charming—ever so much prettier and better groomed than the girls of my youth were—delightful companions and splendid in their particular line of nursing, teaching, writing or secretarial work.

But I doubt if three out of 50 of them could make a dress, cook a decent meal, make up a bed properly or scrub a floor without taking up the two by fours. As for roofing a chicken house or spading up a vegetable garden—they'd think you crazy if you suggested it. And the men are as badly off.

I've a hunch that this is one of the things which ails us—we've grown too specialized in limited lines, too helpless in general. It's bad, for it goes deeper than hand skill—into character itself. There's a sturdy independence that comes with being able to take care of yourself—a flexibility of imagination—a fearlessness that's invaluable. No amount of office efficiency or book learning can compensate for its lack. And yet it is fast vanishing.

We are—I suspect—about to pay very dearly for all these "labor saving" devices of which we're so foolishly proud.

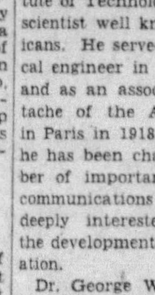
ABOARD SS. MALOLO, July 25.



Will Rogers

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

I used to diden't pay much attention to reports of the heat all over the East and Middle West. Just naturally figured that it was the California papers usual prevaricating license. But our ship radio newspaper every day say its terrible and naturally you got to believe them. They got no lots to sell. Mr. Roosevelt is out here somewhere on Japan's ocean fishing. Awful long way to come to fish. I think he come away out here so he couldn't hear the Republicans roar and to get away from any new scheme that his own gang might cook up. Yours, WILL.

Our Merchant Marine

By CAPTAIN JENS MUNTHE CAPPELEN

Master of the Steamship Georgian

ALL THE first-class nations of the world are building up their armies and navies on a feverish, gigantic scale, especially since the League of Nations received its body blow from Germany and Japan last year.

And now, at last, both the great English-speaking world powers have come to realize that to try any further, by generous and Don Quixotic gestures, to live up to paper agreements of navy limitations, with other nations trying constantly to evade the issues, is FUTILE, and may, in the near future, prove FATAL.

So they have also joined the armament race, and are planning to "bring their navies up to treaty strength."

The question that should be next (and just as important) in their minds is this:

WHAT ABOUT THE AUXILIARY ARM, SO VITAL AND NECESSARY TO THE NAVY—WHAT ABOUT THE MERCHANT MARINE?

In the East, the new island giant, bursting with vitality, overpopulation, and pent up energy, is rapidly and surely expanding and spreading his tentacles of men, trade and ships to all corners of the world.

THE FUTURE LIES ON THE WATERS OF THE OCEAN, whose domination will finally decide the issue.

Where does our country stand in this coming world eruption and what will our ultimate fate be?

Are we prepaired, in the event of a prolonged battle for the supremacy of the sea, to uphold victoriously our end?

Is our Navy going to its fate of thousands of miles away from its main bases?

* * *

HISTORY has shown that hardly any successful and lasting naval victory has ever been decisively won with the battle-fleet too far from its base, and without the proper, adequate and efficient aid of sufficient speedy, trained and seagoing auxiliary vessels to support it.

By these auxiliary vessels I refer to the branch of any seagoing big navy—the fleet of fast, modern, properly manned merchant marine vessels, ready and prepared in time of peace to uphold our international trade lines in case of war, and also, last but not least, to step in immediately and help the navy furnish the all-important part of a transport and supply unit, without which the fighting vessels will be sooner or later strangled and starved in their efforts—without adequate and proper means of replenishing their stores and ammunition, especially in a prolonged fight far away from the base.

What is the sad history of our merchant marine after the war?

Why has it been a play-ball and a target for short-sighted political amateurs, instead of the aim and future hope of serious-minded Americans, who know what vital part it has to play in the coming future world struggle?

IF A COUNTRY HAS NOT AN UP-TO-DATE, EFFICIENT AND WELL-TRAINED MERCHANT MARINE IT CANNOT HAVE AN EFFICIENT FIGHTING NAVY.

One is as necessary as the other. And with an old, slow and out-of-date fleet of merchant vessels the Navy is sadly handicapped from the start.

* * *

THE HISTORY of our merchant marine for the last 15 years—that is, since the war—is a sad, yes, heartbreaking example of what PLAYING POLITICS will do to undermine and make futile the honest efforts of our shipowners to build up an efficient merchant marine.

All the other seagoing countries in the world of any importance, and with a stake in international trade, have during this period built up the merchant fleets BY REPLACING TO A GREAT AND GROWING EXTENT THEIR OLD, SLOW AND OUT OF DATE TRAMP STEAMERS BY NEW, MODERN, FAST, OIL BURNING AND MOSTLY MOTOR-DRIVEN VESSELS OF 14 TO 18 KNOTS, as well as fast, big liners for auxiliary cruiser duties in case of war.

Our only efforts have been to build a few liners with ALMOST NO REPLACEMENT OF THE BULK OF OUR MERCHANT MARINE AT ALL.

This one-sided and futile policy will prove fatal to eventual success in any future struggle for world trade, and even our own domestic trade on the seas, UNLESS SPEEDILY AND EFFICIENTLY REMEDIED AT ONCE.

The sad truth is that our merchant marine—and by this I mean the average tramp steamers—which, after all, form the big, vital part of the marine tonnage of the country—IS NOW RAPIDLY, STEADILY AND WITH INCREASING MOMENTUM HEADED DIRECTLY FOR THE SCRAP HEAP, WITH NO PROGRAM OF REPLACEMENT, MODERNIZATION OR BETTERMENT IN SIGHT.

Unless something is done immediately we shall, in a very few years, see our proud and leading nation take a back place, as before the war, in the hauling of freights for ourselves and others.

We shall be without an adequate auxiliary and vital support for our fighting navy in case of war, and we shall see still more thousands of workless men struggling ashore from these doomed old vessels, with no means of support or of making a decent livelihood ashore.

(Another article on the American Merchant Marine by Capt. Cappelen will appear in an early issue.)

WANDERER A PROBLEM

By Winifred Black

Kate's brother came back from the grave the other day.

Do you know Kate?—kind of a nice, comfortable woman, not particularly brilliant, just well meaning, laughs a lot, don't you know, and has children's parties at her house, and everything.

She thought her brother was dead. He disappeared over thirty years ago and nobody ever heard of him again—and, all at once, just as Kate was giving a rather nice dinner, in walked brother, with a head of snow white hair and a kind, honest, simple face and a pair of blue eyes that would make anyone trust him.

Brother was pleased to see Kate—but it was quite evident that she was nothing in particular in his life.

He was a prospector—not a successful one—oh, he always looked after himself, of course, but the clothes and the hat, and the things he said, dear brother—what a darling he is, after all, but he and Kate—why, it's as if one were talking Choctaw and the other talking some Eskimo dialect.

They try to understand each other but somehow they can't. There have been so many years between, so many long, busy worried, harried years—years full of tears and laughter and if you laugh very hard, it is sometimes hard to understand no matter what anyone says to you.

Well, anyhow, Kate doesn't know what on earth to do with her brother and brother seems to be just as puzzled about Kate. He smokes and listens to the radio and he eats—but what do regular hours for dinner mean to him, and why shouldn't he bring two or three pipe-smoking old cronies up to the living room for the evening, no matter who else is there?

I'm sorry for Kate—no, I'm not sorry for her because of brother. I'm sorry for her because of her own poor little, narrow mind and foolish, conventional standards.

Brother is really a man, honest and straight and full of the simple courage his forefathers had when they came to an unknown land to fight their way alone. But just because he's forgotten about which fork is which and what you say when a very smart woman says she's delighted to meet you, and begins to "kid you along"—Kate is really awfully upset.

Think a minute, what would you do with your brother, the little one who smiled and waved his chubby little hand in a gay good-by to you when he started on his long journey—alone? What kind of a man do you suppose he would have been, would you have liked him, would you have understood him, would he have liked you or would he have thought you an old-fashioned bore?

Time's a thief, there's no doubt of that, but sometimes the things he takes away are not so hard to lose after all.
